COUGHLIN MAKES FIGHT IN CONVENTION

Fall River Candidate and Vahey Present Their Claims for Nomination From Platform—Springfield Tactics Charged in Alleged Attempt to Pack Convention With Vahey Men—Foss for Second Place on the Ticket.

James H. Vahey of Watertown for Governor and Eugene N. Foss of Cohasset for Lieutenant-Governor are the slated candidates at the Democratic State Convention in session in Faneuil Hall, but Mayor John T. Coughlin of Fall River and his henchmen took their boom into the convention hall to make a fight on the floor.

Their first move to have both candidates for Governor take the platform and make speeches, was defeated by temporary Chairman Thomas N. Riley, who ruled the motion out of order because a permanent organization had not been effected. Dr. T. P. Sullivan, manager of the Coughlin boom, declared that he would have a count of delegates and claimed a majority of the delegates for Coughlin.

Thayer's Name Sprung.

Mayor Coughlin was nominated by Charles P. Ryan of Fall River.

Michael F. Flaherty of Whitinsville then arose and sprung a dark horse in the person of John R. Thayer of Worcester. James F. McGovern sprang to his feet and declared that Thayer was not a candidate, but if present would speak for Vahey.

Long speeches by the presiding officers and a very short platform were among the features of the convention. The platform was submitted to Mr. Foss, the candidate for Lieutenant Governor, who refused to run unless it suited him, and after wrangling with Mr. Vahey for two hours he consented to let it go by changing the adjective "shameless" to "inquitous," in the second plank.

Opposition to Foss was confined to grumbling among some of the labor delegates, but did not take an active form.

RICH MAN A SUICIDE WITH GUN

Henry Whiting Flagg son of the treasurer of the Calumet & Hecla Mining Company, Harvard graduate and one of the richest and most popular young society men in Boston, was found dead in the bathroom of his apartments this morning, shot through the head.

The police say it was a clear case of suicide, but are at loss to find a motive.

No Light on Mystery.

The medical examiner and the police hunted throughout his beautiful apartments at No. 14 Ashburton place in vain for some clew to a reason for the act. But there was no note of any kind to shed light on the mystery.

The body was found at 8 o'clock by Wendell Peaslee, the assistant janitor. Mr. Flagg was in his pajamas. His face was covered with blood and in his right hand he still clutched the revolver with which he had taken his life.

Young Flagg was thirty years old and unmarried. As far as his friends know, he had no love affairs and there was little chance of his having business troubles. His father, George A. Flagg, is a millionaire who resides in Hollliston, and is a large holder of stock in the Calumet & Hecla, the richest mining concern in America.

The young man held only a clerical position with the company. There was no trouble of any kind with his work or accounts.

Dead for Some Hours.

Immediately after the body was found Medical Examiner Magrath was summoned and the father of the dead man notified. Mr. Flagg was at his home in Hollliston when informed of his son's suicide, and with a younger son hastened to Boston, where he met the medical examiner on the scene of the tragedy.

After an examination of the body and the details surrounding the mysterious death Magrath gave out a statement that the young man had undoubtedly taken his own life and that he had been dead for some time.

Health Had Failed.

Ill health is the only motive for the suicide that officials of the Calumet & Hecla and fellow workers in the office with Flagg will entertain. They declare that he has been failing for the past year or two and that since his return from the Bay State unknowingly, in which he participated with the First Corps Cadets, he has not been at all well.

His good spirits, which made him one of the most popular and sought-after members of the younger set in Boston society, have been leaving of late, and instead, his fellow workers say, he has been morose and inclined to brood over something.

One of the men closest to Flagg said to-day he believed that the young man's mind has been deranged from some worry and illness.

Was Harvard Graduate.

Flagg was graduated from Harvard in 1900 and during his course was prominent in all the social affairs of the college. He was a member of the leading clubs, and was well liked by all classes.

Since his graduation he has been employed in a clerical position at the Calumet & Hecla office, No. 10 Ashburton place, while his father added to his salary and made it possible for him to live in the finest style. He was a member of many of the leading clubs of this city and the North Shore, and was well liked everywhere.

MILKMAN FINED $75; BLAMES THE COWS

William P. Crowley, a milk dealer in Newton Upper Falls, was fined $50 for having watered milk in his possession and $25 for having milk below the standard. He appealed both decisions by Judge Kennedy in the Newton court to-day. Crowley said his cattle were to blame for the quality of his milk and Judge Kennedy said he knew that the high price of grain made it difficult for milkmen to feed their cows to the way to get rich milk. Crowley gave bonds in $900.

TO HONOR CURTISS.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Preparations are being made by the joint committee of the Washington Aero Club and the aviation committee of the Chamber of Commerce to hold a reception for Glenn Curtiss early in October.

THE RIVALS

SHOOTS WOMAN TWICE

Samuel D. Kennison fired two shots from a revolver at his sister-in-law, Mrs Emma L. Young, at No. 35 Brighton street Charlestown, to-day. The man was angered because Mrs. Young had ordered him from the house, where he has been living for some time.

Both shots hit the woman, one inflicting a wound in the left hand, the second slightly grazing her neck. After the shooting Kennison ran from the house.

On her way from the Relief Hospital, where her wounds had been dressed, Mrs. Young saw Kennison standing in City square, just before noon. She jumped off of the car, and running to Policeman Jeremiah Crowley said:

"There is the man who shot me!"

Kennison heard her and started to run. The officer gave chase and finally caught him. Kennison was locked up in the City square police station charged with assault with intent to murder. He was asked why he shot his sister-in-law.

"I don't know," he said.

Kennison is forty-two years old. He has made her home at Mrs. Young's house for some years. The only reason Mrs. Young can assign for his shooting her is what he said before he drew out the revolver and fired.

"Emma, we might as well finish this now. You and your son have ordered me from the house."

100,000 CHEER TAFT'S SPEECH AT EXPOSITION

By WILLIAM HOSTER.

SEATTLE, Sept. 30. — Fully 100,000 people cheered President Taft as he entered the Alaska-Yukon exposition grounds shortly after 9 a. m. to-day. But for the good nature of the people there might have been a serious crush, for the police were utterly unable to handle the crowds satisfactorily. The President was given a demonstration. The parade of all nations immediately followed.

Two hundred school children manoeuvred before the President, forming the letters TAFT.

Following his review of the parade the President was taken through the exposition to view the exhibits. He lingered a long time at the Philippine display and spent a half hour in the Igorote village.

This afternoon in the national amphitheatre the President before a tremendous audience delivered a long address on the future of Alaska. Tonight he will be the guest of honor at the banquet given in the Washington state building by Gov. M. E. Hay.

FOUR STEAMERS COLLIDE.

ROTTERDAM, Sept. 30.—Four steamers were damaged in collisions here to-day. The British vessel Thornbock collided with the Dutch craft Solo and the Spanish steamer Rosario ran into the English boat Bathurst. The vessels were not seriously damaged.

Worth Knowing About

Doctors prescribe Father John's Medicine. Heals throat and lungs.

REYNOLDS CONFERS WITH LYMAN HERE

James B. Reynolds, first assistant secretary of the treasury, spent an hour and a half to-day in conference with Collector of the Port Lyman, in discussing the affairs of the port service, which, because of an alleged violation of the rules of the service in that the inspectors here lobbied at Washington for an increase of pay, has been considerably in the public eye of late. Mr. Reynolds after the conference refused to discuss the matter.

PARDON ROONEY ON PERJURY SENTENCE

Governor Draper has pardoned W. T. Rooney of Revere, who was sentenced on June 1 to serve a year in the House of Correction on a charge of perjury. Rooney was served with a legal document, but subsequently denied in court that he had received it. His counsel, Guy A. Ham, argued before the Governor that it was an overslight than intentional wrong on the part of his client.

TAFT AND HUGHES AT NOV. 15 BANQUET

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Sept. 25.—The Chamber of Commerce has received assurances that President Taft and Governor Hughes of New York will be guests at the annual banquet of the body on Nov. 15.

SHIBE PARK, Philadelphia, Sept. 30.—In a desperate attempt to overhaul the Tigers the Athletics played a double header with the White Sox for the second time in two days.

Young Dygert was sent in to hold the "hitless wonders" down to cases, while Schott, one of the best of Chicago's staff, was opposed to the spithall artist.

A crowd of 4,000 faithful fans was on hand, hoping against hope that something would turn up to bring one end of the world's championship series to Philadelphia.

Dygert started off in fine style by striking out two of the first three men to face him, including P. Dougherty.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS Sept. 30.—Losing that double-header kind of took the edge off the fans' enthusiasm and the crowd at the game to-day was not a record-breaker. But, at that, the fine weather drew out a fair-sized assemblage.

The Red Sox promised to make up for their errors of omission and commission and they started out to-day as if they meant business. As for the Tigers they were spurred on by the energetic Jennings and at the start it looked like a close and exciting battle.

Manager Lake had Joe Woods and Colkins, the former Vermont college star, up his sleeve for box duty, while Jennings had Mullin, Donovan and Willett all warmed up for the fray. The Detroit manager wanted particularly to win this afternoon. He figured that the Athletics would lose one of the games at Philadelphia and then there would be no chance for argument. While the Tigers have the pennant practically cinched they took no chances.

THIRD BLACK HAND LETTER SENT BAKER

Guiseppi Seminara, a baker at No. 24 Charter street, North End, received a postal card signed by the Black Hand Society and ordering him to leave $200 at the foot of the Soldiers' monument in the Commmon. Seminara, who six months ago received a similar message and a year ago another like it, told Sergeant Gallivan of the Hanover street police station. Patrolman Joseph Cavignaro is working on the case.

REST CASE IN CONTEST OVER $500,000 WILL

Attorneys for Daniel Blake Russell, who claims to be the son of Daniel Russell of Melrose and who hopes to secure half of the $500,000 estate left by the older man and now in the possession of William C. Russell, completed their case at 11:10 today. The respondents case started twenty minutes later.

Thirty-six witnesses testified that the petitioner was Daniel Blake Russell, son of Daniel Russell. Early to-day it became known that Attorney Simpson, for Daniel Blake Russell, felt confident that he had proved his claim and would save the feelings of the petitioner and his former sweetheart, Miss Hattie Keith of Melrose, for the trial in the Supreme court.

The respondents will have as many witnesses as did the petitioner. One will be Levi S. Gould, one of the county commissioners for Middlesex and former Mayor of Melrose.

Miss Ida Lyad Hill, a manicurist of Melrose, took the stand when court opened today. She was cross-examined by Attorney Proctor. She denied that she had any ill feeling against William C. Russell because he used to peek at her from around the corner of buildings when she was a little girl. She also denied that she was glad that some one had appeared to contest the right of William C. Russell to hold the vast fortune left by his father.

Attorney Simpson then introduced a deposition by the seventy-year-old father-in-law of Daniel Blake Russell. In it the aged man declared that he had always known his son-in-law as Dan Blake and denied that he married his daughter under that name. He said that his son-in-law often spoke of his father as a rich man who lived in the East.

WRIGHT READY TO STAY HOUR IN AIR TO-DAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Wilbur Wright went to Governor's Island bright and early to-day, inspected his aeroplane in which he made three magnificent flights yesterday, tested the velocity of the wind, dodging it to be about right, and then announced that he would make a series of official flights to-day.

The word "official" used by Wright meant that he would endeavor to remain in the air for an hour, and that he would try to fly up the Hudson River, probably as far as Grant's tomb.

Glenn H. Curtiss did not like the atmosphere, and said he would not make any flights unless the wind died down.

"I want to make my initial trials in a dead calm," he said. "I have plenty of time and so I shall wait."

The feats performed by Wright yesterday out all New York airship mad to-day.

As early as 6:30 o'clock persons began gathering along the Battery wall. By 8 o'clock people were standing on the tops of the downtown skyscrapers gazing eagerly toward Governor's Island.

Wright went over to the island at 7:15 o'clock. He was greeted by a delegation of army officers and showered with congratulations. If Wright experienced any of the enthusiasm shown by those who surrounded him he did not show it.

"You've shown New York a wonder it has not witnessed since Fulton got out in the Clermont," said one officer.

"Have I?" asked Wright.

Curtiss was in no addioning shed. He came out and looked at Wright. The Dayton aviator glanced over and gave him a cordial nod. Curtiss returned the greeting in kind. Wright then went outside and looked at the atmospheric conditions.

"Will you fly to-day?" a reporter asked him. Wright turned toward him with a pleasant smile. He looked at the reporter for a few moments without saying anything, and then began studying the wind by observing the smoke from passing boats. "There's a pretty strong wind," some one suggested. This only elicited another scarcely audible from Wright. After several minutes he finally turned and said:

"Yes, the wind is pretty brisk, but that isn't too strong for a flight. There was more wind than this yesterday."

CLEVELAND MOFFETT'S GREAT MYSTERY STORY "THROUGH THE WALL" Begins In Next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN

SKULL BROKEN; MAN DRAGGED ABOUT BY DOCTORS AND POLICE

Patrick Welch, about eleven nothing is known but his name, died to-day from a fractured skull in the City Hospital.

His death followed a series of startling experiences. He was taken into Grace Hospital, dragged from there by the police to the Lagrange street station on a charge of drunkenness, hurried off to the City Prison because he showed signs of insanity, and then finally hauled away while dying to the City Hospital.

That the man's skull was broken was not found out by the doctors or the police or prison authorities for hours after he was found by a citizen lying unconscious in front of No. 29 Lincoln street.

At Grace Hospital, the doctors after treating the man and receiving his name, called him by his name a drunk. The hospital people knew Welch by police.

Thrust Into a Cell.

The police dragged the man into their patrol wagon and handled him into the Lagrange street station. He was booked as a drunk and thrust into a cell.

In the cell Welch's mind gave way because of the fracture of his skull. He began to show signs of insanity. Then Lieutenant James Cusney, in charge of that police station, had the man taken to the City Prison in Suffolk street.

There the man was examined and then hurried into a padded cell. Soon one of the guards found him rolling on the cell floor groaning in agony.

Found Man Was Dying.

Police Surgeon William Dunn was sent for. He examined the man, who was in the insane room. The police surgeon, didn't find that Welch's skull had been broken, but he did know that the man was dying.

Under Dr. Dunn's orders the man about whom nothing is known but his name was carried away to the City Hospital.

Then for the third time Welch was subjected to a medical examination and the City Hospital surgeons found out what the real injury to the man was.

Neither drunk nor insane, but a dying man who had been mysteriously assaulted and struck down in indifference on a busy street, Welch was carried around from hospital to police station to City Prison and then to hospital again, only to die.

Welch was found in Lincoln street at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He was brought from police to post by the police and police surgeons until he died in the City Hospital at 8:50 last night.

And the medical examiner, George E. Magrath, says he should have been notified the moment the man died. Beyond nothing of the mysterious case until informed of it by the police reporters this morning, almost twelve hours later.

What the Police Are Doing.

Now the police are trying to solve the mystery of the affair to find out how Welch received his death blow and who the man really was.

The police are as yet unable to say whether Welch fell and broke his skull or whether he was the victim of a murderous assault.

Medical Examiner Magrath is performing an autopsy. This may throw some light on the mystery. In the meantime the police are getting busy to find out what they can.

But no explanation has been secured of how a man was found lying on a public thoroughfare, hurried into a hospital, examined there, ordered from there under orders of physicians to a police station, dragged there to prison officials to undergo surgical treatment, returned to the prison hospital, then to medical men, found to be dying and sent to the City Hospital, where he died, and then found to be suffering from a fractured skull.

MAN HUNT ON AFTER ATTACK UPON WOMEN

Following two desperate attacks upon Wellesley women since Saturday, the police are holding a man who is supposed to be responsible in both cases and who is believed to be in hiding in the woods on the outskirts of the town. Reports of the attacks have terrorized women living away from the centre of the town and they are keeping indoors after dark.

Saturday a strange man suddenly came out of the woods on the outskirts of the town and seized Miss Isabel Rendall of Hawthorn Park, a Wellesley College girl, who was out for a walk. There was a brief struggle and then the man, frightened by the girl's screams, ran away.

His latest appearance was at the home of Mrs. James Atkinson on Highland avenue. Mrs. Atkinson went out after dark to take in some washing that was upon a clothesline in the yard back of her home. Suddenly she was seized about the shoulders by a man. He struggled to force herself her clothing was torn. Her screams frightened away her assailant, who ran into the woods.

JAIL WOMAN'S HOME; SHE IS SENT BACK

NEW YORK, Sept. 30. An old woman arrested for drunkenness was before Magistrate Fitch in the Long Island City Court. "Where is your home?" asked the magistrate. After a long pleaded guilty. "In the county jail, your Honor" was the matter of fact reply. "Well, I'd hate to deprive you of so much room for you at your home," said Magistrate Fitch. "You can go back there for thirty days more." "Thank you, Judge," she said.

HOT BOX DELAYS NEWSPAPER TRAIN

The special newspaper and mail train which leaves New York shortly after 2 a. m. and is due in Boston at 7:25 a. m. reached Boston at 9:20, or fifty-five minutes late, to-day, owing to a hot box at New London. Delays on the arrival of this train caused considerable annoyance to Boston business men, as it holds up the delivery of their mail.

MORSE SURE OF TWO DAYS IN PRISON

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Unless some legal loophole is discovered Charles W. Morse, the convicted financier, will have to go back to the tombs owing to a lapse of two days between the expiration on October 3 of his full bond of $125,000 and the calling of his case before the United States Circuit Court of appeals on October 11.

Mr. Morse and his lawyer spent most of the day in the Federal building, where conferences were held with Judge Lacombe and representatives of the United States attorney's office, in an effort to have his bail extended, it was said, however, that only the United States Court of appeals could grant such a request, and that court does not meet until October 11. It is expected, therefore, that Morse will surrender himself on October 9.

It became known to-day that Morse has regained control of the Hudson Navigation company and has been elected president. It is expected that he will resume active charge of the Metropolitan steamship company after the foreclosure sale on October 5, thus fulfilling the predictions that he would recoup his shattered fortune to some extent.

The Hudson Navigation company was owned by Mr. Morse for several years before the foundation of the Consolidated Steamship lines was undertaken. It was never merged into this concern, but always remained an outside proposition. It also owned the New Jersey Steamship Company, People's Lines and acquired control of the Citizens' Steamship Company of Troy. The Morse line was taken over early in 1908. The authorized capital stock of the company is $8,000,000. The company operates seven steamers, among them the Albert W. Morse and the Adirondack, plying between this city, Albany and Troy.

HOPE FOR LIFE OF AUTOIST LYTLE

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—It was said at the Western Long Island Hospital to-day that there was hope for the life of Herbert Lytle, the auto driver who was supposed to have been fatally hurt in the race accident in which his mechanician, Joe Hatch, was killed yesterday. Lytle suffered concussion of the brain. His wife was at his bedside to-day.

CRAZED BY FLIGHTS, OFFICER KILLS SELF

NEW YORK, Sept. 30. Crazed by the extremity of the aeroplane flights, Sergeant James Carron of Company I, 29th Infantry, shot himself through the head early to-day. Carron was [illegible] and was [illegible] suicide on [illegible] Island in three weeks.

FEVER SPREAD STIRS ORANGE

ORANGE, Sept. 30.—The epidemic of scarlet fever is still raging in this town, scores of new cases being reported to the Board of Health to-day. The number is now nearly forty, and Dr. Leach fears there will be at least 100 before the end of the week.

The school children are falling victims to the disease rapidly and the schools may be closed until the scare is over. Every physician in the town is overworked.

The Board of Health has been severely criticised in some quarters, many charging neglect in fumigating the house where the epidemic is said to have had its origin.

So many houses have been quarantined that the Board of Health has run short of red warning cards and are using red paper until the supply of cards, which is being rushed here, arrives.

IRELAND IN WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul, on his way East, is stopping over in Washington for a few days, visiting friends.

LABOR JOINS 1915 FAIR

Still another local labor organization, Bookbinders' Union No. 16, has determined to take part in the "Boston 1915 Exposition" at the old Art Museum in November, this being unanimously voted by the executive committee of the Bookbinders' Union following the endorsement of the "1915 Exposition" by the Boston Central Labor Union.

In addition to the Bookbinders, the Cigarmakers, Carpenters, Garment Workers and Typographical Unions of Boston also will have trade union exhibits at the 1915 Exposition, with other union exhibits likely to be entered as soon as it is possible to have the question brought before the various labor organizations of the city.

This will be the first time in the history of trade unionism in Boston that the labor organizations as a whole have taken part in any of the big fairs or expositions.

TO CHECK BIG MONEY DRAIN

The immigration question will be one of the problems with which the next Congress will have to deal. Commissioner-General of Immigration Keefe is preparing the draft of a bill to be submitted to the Senate and House in December, the object of which is to radically amend and revise the existing immigration and naturalization laws.

If enacted into law it would restrict immigration to aliens intending to become naturalized citizens, and would bar from America these foreigners who simply come here long enough to make and save money which they carry back to their homes.

Millions of dollars annually, according to Secretary Meyer, who became familiar with the situation while Postmaster-General, are taken out of the United States and sent to Italy and other European countries by foreigners.

MRS. CHARLES TO MAKE LAST PARDON PLEA

Never flagging in her efforts, borne up by hope and love, Mrs. Warry S. Charles is making one last desperate effort to save her husband from the electric chair.

To-night Min Sing, Leong Gong and Hom Woon, three of the five Chinamen condemned to die in the electric chair for the murder of four of their fellow countrymen on August 2, 1907, will be removed from Charles Street Jail to Charlestown State Prison. Joe Guey and Warry Charles will not be taken to the State Prison until Thursday, October 7.

Governor Draper has been appealed to for executive clemency for Warry Charles and Joe Guey. Next Monday he will announce the date for the hearing when General Charles R. Bartlett and Harvey N. Pratt, counsel for all of the condemned men, but acting now for Mrs. Charles in her last desperate effort to save her husband, will argue why the death sentence should never be executed upon Charles and Guey.

"My husband is innocent of complicity or anything connected with those murders and the four men condemned with him are innocent also," said Mrs. Charles to-day.

"I am going to go before the Governor myself whenever he comes into town for the hearing on this petition for the pardoning of my husband. I'm going to do everything that a weak woman can for her husband.

"Mr. Charles will be murdered if the State takes his life in the electric chair. The real murderers are at large and have worked for months to secure evidence showing that my husband and those who are arrested with him are innocent of those murders.

"I have secured evidence to show that my husband had no hand in the shooting, and that he never even suggested it or knew anything about it. I have not lost hope. I'm trusting in the Governor's sense of justice and his broad mental appraisal of judgment and for a pardon or commutation of the sentence.

"Two Chinamen swore against my husband. Four American citizens swore that Mr. Charles was in Waltham the Sunday before the murders, when it was said that he had attended a meeting where he advised the shooting. I know that he was in Waltham and couldn't have attended any such meeting, the witnesses will be, indeed, be mistaken, but could four? Would four men be brought all to tell the same lie?

"I see my husband four times a week. He has not lost hope, nor will he. He knows that he is innocent, and that has sustained him during this fearful ordeal. He will be free yet. The truth will come out. I visit him as often as I am allowed and I do everything that I can to help me to bear him up.

"We will not hear from Governor Draper until next Monday so far from before he will grant us a hearing in the petition for Warry Charles and Joe Guey. Assistant Attorney Harvey N. Pratt to-day.

"The Governor only informed General Bartlett and me that he was to be away until Monday of next week, but that he would take this matter up then and decide when he would hold the hearing.

"We do not expect him to hold a hearing next week, and while the following week is the one set for the execution of three of the condemned men, the Governor could grant a reprieve until the case could be taken up with him."

Min Sing, Leong Gong and Hom Woon, all members of the Hop Sing Tong, were sentenced to die during the week beginning Sunday, October 3. Warry Charles and Joe Guey are sentenced to march to their deaths in the chair some time during the week beginning Sunday, October 17.

Warry Charles is a white man. He is educated and believed to be wealthy. Years ago he was known as an important service for the State and city and he helped in the investigations which conducted a rigid investigation of conditions in Ah Sam's Chinatown, since he has lived in Boston he has been a leader among the Chinese and for many years was a trusted court interpreter.

Ten Chinamen were originally arrested, charged with being responsible for the shooting up in Chinatown during the House Week in Boston in August, 1907. One of the men died and nine were tried for the crime. Yee Jung Wong How and Dong Bok Sing were finally acquitted.

On July 7, 1908, a new trial was granted and in January of this year the five men were found guilty and July 3 the sentences of death were imposed. A large sum of money has been raised by republicans here and in New York, to save Charles from death.

VANDERBILT, SR. TO MAKE PEACE

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—A cable dispatch from Paris to-day stating that William K. Vanderbilt, Sr., sailed from Cherbourg for New York on the Kronprinzess Cecilie caused a stir in New York society. It is believed by many that the order Mr. Van derbilt is returning home to take part in the marital affairs of his son, William K., Jr., who is reported to have prepared articles of separation from his wife.

The other day Mr. Vanderbilt, Sr., was quoted as having declared that there had been too many divorces in the family and he intended to see that there were no more.

His abrupt departure from Paris for this country is taken as a direct sequel to this declaration.

You see the AMERICAN everywhere—in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

ROB BANK AT PISTOL POINT

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, Col., Sept. 30.—The Citizens' National Bank of Glenwood Springs was robbed of $10,000 by three unmasked, but heavily armed men, who escaped. The robbers rode up to the rear of the bank, dismounted and tied their horses. They went to the front entrance, and while one walked in the third remained in the door as a guard. Assistant Cashier E. E. Drach was seated at the cashier's window. The robbers covered him and told him to "fork over." Drach gave the men all the money in sight, which they put in sack. The robbers then mounted and started away. The sheriff's posse is in pursuit.

25,000 LAND AND SEA FIGHTERS TAKE PART IN NEW YORK PARADE

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The military parade of 25,000 men, as many as formerly made up the standing army of the United States, was the big feature of the Hudson-Fulton celebration today. Hours before the time of the start hundreds of thousands gathered along the line of march, trying to the utmost the strength of 6,000 policemen.

In the line of march were representatives from every branch of the army and navy.

The various semi-military institutions also paraded, headed by the Albany Burgess Corps and the Old Guard. All organizations were in full dress, and squadron A, as usual, was given the position of honor in the van as guard to the chief marshal, General Charles F. Roe.

In the court of honor, at Fifth avenue and Forty-second street, were Governor Hughes and other notables to review the great line, more than seven miles long.

Troops came all the way from Rutland, Vt., Fort Myer and Washington, D. C., to participate, and the steamer Pilgrim came down from West Point with a detachment of cadets. Jackies from the warships in the international navy filed in the color scheme. The French sailors stood shoulder to shoulder along beside the English, Mexicans, Dutch and Americans.

The route of the parade was the same as for the pageant, starting at One Hundred and Tenth street, moving down to Fifth avenue, thence to Fifth avenue, thence to Washington Arch. The line of march was headed by sailors of the foreign navies, followed by United States officials.

Services were held simultaneously in educational institutions throughout the State. Notable programs were prepared especially at Cornell University and Hobart College. In the city of New York especially adapted programs were carried out, grading upward from the smallest pupils.

The battleships were eclipsed to-day by the parade. Few sailors were left upon them. Immediately after entering every battleship from Forty-second street to Spuyten Duyvil became a scene of activity. Until to-day the sailors and marines had looked on, but now they became the central figures in the celebration.

New York shared some of her enthusiasm with the people of Cooking and Haverstraw, the Clermont and Half Moon coming along their voyage up the Hudson.

IS MRS. SAGE SECRET DONOR OF $250,000?

NEWPORT, Sept. 30.—It is believed that either Mrs. Russell Sage or Miss Helen Gould is the donor of $250,000 for a club house for the Newport branch of the Army and Navy Young Men's Christian Association. The name of the donor has been kept secret.

It was thought at one time that the benefactor was Edwin J. Berwind, a coal baron who is in office at No. 1 Broadway, New York, and owner of the Kingscote place in Newport. The name of Mrs. Theodore N. Gibbs was also mentioned.

Mrs. Sage inherited the great bulk of her husband's fortune, about $64,000,000, and has given much to society. Miss Gould's benefactions have amounted to many millions. But whether either gave the $250,000 for the Army and Navy branch in this city is a secret closely guarded by Secretary Edward O. Andrews of the branch.

ENGINEER FOR CITY QUIZZED IN STEEL CASE

District-Attorney Hill to-day turned his batteries against the purported agent of the Berlin Construction Company, one of the thirty-two defendants in the steel cases, following the order of Judge Harris for a verdict of not guilty to be rendered against that corporation. Judge Harris's ruling was based on the fact that the corporation was incorporated after the acts on which the defendants are on trial are alleged to have been committed.

The District-Attorney sought to introduce testimony to the effect that Harry C. Collins, an individual defendant, had business relations with the city as the agent of the Berlin Construction Company. The questions were asked of Frederick B. Fay, an engineer for the city. They were strenuously objected to by the lawyers for the defence, but finally allowed by Judge Harris as affecting Collins as an individual and not the corporation he is alleged to have represented.

Engineer on Stand.

Fay was asked about his relations with the American Bridge Company from 1902 to 1908.

"During their use," said the witness, "I received fifty-nine bids for structural steel purporting to come from the American, with that company I talked with the defendant Edward H. Stearns, and a Mr. Kattell. Both of these men were at the office of the company in this city.

"Any conversations related to bridge bids for which had been advertised by the city. Stearns represented himself to be the agent of the American Bridge Company with their bids," the witness was asked.

"Yes, he did, often," was the reply.

Question Is Admitted.

"Did you often converse with a man named Kattell?" This question was objected to on the ground that Kattell was not named as a defendant in the case. To the objection the district-attorney replied:

"I offer to this to show that shortly after the indictment of the American Bridge Company, the defendant, Stearns, ceased to be the agent of the American Bridge Company, and that Kattell succeeded him in that capacity."

The question was admitted.

BITTER FIGHT ON FAY WILL

A bitterly fought will case began in the Supreme Court to-day before Judge Hogan in which the sisters and brothers of the late Temple R. Fay of Charles street, are endeavoring to obtain property worth $40,000. Fay was in the East Indian trading business and lived with two unmarried sisters at the family home in the Back Bay. Under his will Theresa N. and Elsie Fay receive the bulk of the estate.

Wilson W. Fay, a State street banker and broker, and his two married sisters, Mrs. Sherwood of Wellesley, and Mrs. Henry Colpin, who are contesting the will on the ground that undue influence was used. To-day several witnesses testified to the mental condition of Fay prior to his death. Fay was a prominent member of the Algonquin, Exchange and Brookline Country Clubs. He died July, 1908.

STAR BOXER KILLER DEAD

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—Augustus P. Chanlot, hero of the Boxer uprising, died at Larkspur of consumption. He had been destitute for some time. He suffered for to the last by his bride of several weeks, who was formerly Miss Dollar of New York.

Auguste P. Chanlot's life was romantic and adventurous. He went to Pekin in 1885, before he was sixteen years old, with only forty cents in his pocket. Chanlot and his wife between them lived 700 hours during the siege. One day himself killed fifty-four, while she in seventeen hours single day. They were wounded themselves.

U. S. TARS WIN BIG BOAT RACE

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Twelve hardy youngsters from the battleship Minnesota, who represented America against the world in the great international boat race on the Hudson, are receiving congratulations to-day.

It was America first and the others nowhere. The Americans took the jump on the men of the Victoria Louisa of the German fleet, the crew from the Etruria of the Italian fleet and the picked crew of Englishmen, to say nothing of the reserve cutter entry, and though the Germans pulled like fiends for the first half mile, the Americans, maintaining a steady forty strokes to the minute, hauled ahead and at the end of the first mile were so far in the lead that there was no chance to overtake them.

BANKERS DEAL BLOW AT RYAN

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The election of Samuel McRoberts of Chicago as vice president of the National City Bank is generally accepted in the financial district as a new move in the National City's contest against Thomas F. Ryan for dealing nation as the Central Bank of Issue of the United States when that institution in the nation's financial system shall be authorized by law.

It is also asserted that McRoberts' "unexpected introduction into the banking world of the East" signifies the welding together of the heaviest financial interests of the West with those of the East for the accomplishment of the object stated. It means likewise that J. Ogden Armour, a residuary head of the great house of Armour & Co., is beginning to assert forcibly in the national field of finance the tremendous power that resides in his control of the huge interests represented by the family name.

RATS! PANIC ON WHARVES

Thousands of huge wharf rats invaded the Atlantic Avenue water front to-day as a result of an extremely high tide. Many cellars along the avenue were flooded. Dr. T. Wharf the fishermen and employes of the fish companies turned out with pitchforks and fought the rats, assisted by a number of dogs. The rats reached Atlantic avenue, causing screams of fright from women passersby. One young woman ran up the Elevated station steps at the foot of State street and screamed until some rats around the station steps were driven away. The tide was the highest in many years, for many reaching the top of the planking on T and Long wharves. The second high tide of the day will be at this week down, an effort to clear the rats back to their holes under the wharves.

THIEVES IN KHAKI LOOT TWO STORES

Four men who wore khaki clothes while John R. Sullivan of No. 100 Harvard street believes to be army uniforms, broke into two stores on Harvard street, Cambridge, at 2:30 a. m. to-day, and looted them. Four patrolmen in a patrol wagon who were notified by Sullivan, arrived on the scene a few minutes after the men escaped, and searched the neighborhood for an hour in vain. The men looted Kidder's, drug-store, Harvard and Wilson streets, and broke into Hicks' store, where they found only twenty-five cents in the cash drawer.

GOV. DRAPER INVESTIGATES MILK TRUST

That a "milk trust," composed of five concerns working with a mutual understanding absolutely controls the milk business in Greater Boston, is the charge made to Governor Draper by George Alfred of Concord, who asks for an investigation by the Governor of the milk situation in Boston.

Mr. Alfred also shows by figures that the milk producers around Boston must pay as much to ship milk into Boston from Concord, twenty miles out, as Pittsfield farmers pay for shipping their milk into New York, 155 miles away. Mr. Alfred charges that owing to these high rates, Massachusetts farmers must sell their milk at the reduced rations to the milk trust contractors to bring into Boston, whereas in other cities the farmers bring their milk into the big cities and sell it to consumers themselves.

Governor Draper is now considering this this evidence.

FITZGERALD DENIES SECRET ISLAND VISIT

James F. Fitzgerald, brother of former Mayor Fitzgerald, visited the BOSTON AMERICAN today to deny that he had paid a secret visit to Deer Island. Mitchell, now serving one year in the House of Correction at Deer Island, for conspiring to defraud the city out of about $14,000 in flagstone contracts during the Fitzgerald regime. Mitchell was the street department purchasing agent appointed by Mayor Fitzgerald.

An evening paper said that James F. Fitzgerald and the head of a city department motored west to Deer Island secretly, and instead of taking the steamboat went to Point Shirley and crossed the gut to avoid having their visit to Mitchell known.

Mr. Fitzgerald said:

"Mike Mitchell has been my friend for twenty years. One newspaper stated that I and a head of a city department secretly went to Deer Island to see him. That we went in secret is not true. I did visit Mr. Mitchell at Deer Island about two months ago. He has always been my close confidential friend, and I hope we will always have the same friendship for each other. I believe him to be an honest man.

"We go to secret dull. I am a trustee of a public institutions department got permission from Penal Commissioner Skinner and started to take the 2 o'clock boat, but missed it. For that reason we went to Winthrop and crossed the gut in a motor boat. There was no attempt at secrecy in that.

"We met Deputy Commissioner Herbert S. Carruth at Deer Island, and the story that appeared in an evening newspaper would not have been printed but for the action of that charitable, kind-hearted man, who begged my brother to appoint him to the position he now holds. My sole regret is that I can't see Mr. Mitchell every day. I have never known him to do a wrong act.

HARVARD OPEN, REGISTRATION SHOWS GAINS

Harvard began its two hundred and seventy-fourth year today. From all indications there will be one of the largest registrations in the history of the University. In the law school the entering class numbers about 300. There are at least 700 freshmen in the college. The new medical school shows a greatly increased attendance there being at least fifty entering classmen.

The freshmen registered yesterday. Today the members of the senior and junior and sophomore classes are registering. The freshmen are consulting advising professors upon the courses they will pursue, while older classmen are busy greeting each other and renewing friendships.

President A. Lawrence Lowell has many important problems on his hands. He is really just starting upon his new duties. Next week three days will be devoted to his formal inauguration in Harvard yard. During those days there will be no lectures nor recitations in order that every one may have an opportunity to attend the ceremonies.

President Lowell also has a restaurant problem to dispose of. Memorial Hall and Randall Hall, the two big dining halls may not be run during the entire year. It all depends upon the support of the students. Memorial and Randall are being run now under one management.

Memorial is run on the American plan and $3.25 a week is the charge for board there. Randall is operated on a club plan. There are several changes in the faculty. Professor F. W. Taussig, professor of economics, is away for a year. Professors Bullock and Carver are to teach his classes.

Former Mayor Nathan Matthews now figures as an instructor. He is to conduct a course on "Municipal government in the United States, with special reference to Massachusetts cities." "Government 300" is the way this course is styled.

Professor Edward Meyer is the exchange professor from the University of Berlin this year. He is to lecture on ancient and modern history.

Paul Moore has gone to Berlin, where he will lecture in the History of Religion.

Professors Swain and Clifford of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology are to teach in Harvard. They are really there to reorganize the Harvard engineering and scientific school when the $1,000,000 endowment left for this purpose by the late Gordon McKay becomes available.

A report was made to the Dorchester police today that a sneak thief posing as a laundry agent entered the apartment of Mrs. Sarah J. Childs at No. 30 Hancock street, and stole furs and jewelry to the value of $1,000, yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Childs was away from home, and the man spent the afternoon ransacking the apartment. He secured a set of sealskin furs valued at $850, jewelry valued at $500, including a gold watch and locket, a valuable gold watch chain, a diamond pin, a Roman gold ring over 200 years old, and a number of small pieces of jewelry.

The man is described as smooth of face, five feet ten inches tall, wearing dark clothes and a light derby hat, and with a slight impediment in his speech. He called at the Childs home at the apartment house, where he was told that the family was away. He claimed he was looking for to adjust a laundry bill, might live on the floor above. He went up, and finding no one at home, entered the house with false keys. Mrs. Rogers applies the second floor apartment below heard him walking around, but supposed he was some member of the family of Mrs. Childs.

MR. LYSANDER C. FIGG.

Mr. Lysander C. Figg of Chicago, Ill., says, owing to kidney and liver trouble, he was so run down that he had to quit work. On the advice of a friend, he tried Warner's Safe Cure, and within two months was a well man.

"Last Spring I was in poor health, my system was run down and debilitated. Cause, liver and kidney trouble. I lacked energy or ambition to do my work and felt that I must have a change and rest.

I was advised to give Warner's Safe Cure a trial. I found it so effective that in two months I was a well man. I cannot praise it too highly for the people who suffer from kidney and liver troubles."—Lysander C. Figg, Wychmere Hotel, Chicago, Ill.

DEMOCRATS NAME TICKET FOR STATE CAMPAIGN

ANIMATED SESSION OF PARTY DELEGATES IN FANEUIL HALL TO-DAY.

The rest of the slate was expected to go through without opposition.

Hoar Is Dropped.

The only state contains some surprises. It drops Roger Sherman Hoar, scion of the blue nobility of Concord and organizer of the Harvard Democratic club of 1908, for the Williams College professor, Mr. Bryan has a barrel and is a liberal spender. While in the House in 1907 he was very popular personally, but managed to fight with the Republicans as often as with the Democrats. He was president of the famous "Codfish Club," of the Legislature of that year.

Forgets Chairman Riley.

The convention was called to order at 11:30 o'clock by chairman of the State Committee Fred J. MacLeod, who forgot to introduce temporary Chairman Thomas P. Riley. Mr. Riley, however, took the chair and delivered a speech of considerable length in which he attacked the Republican party on State issues.

When he had concluded and appointed the committees the first break came in the cut-and-dried program. Dr. T. P. Sullivan, leader of the Coughlin forces, demanded recognition. Many of the delegates thought that Coughlin had been persuaded to withdraw. Not at all. Dr. Sullivan demanded that the chair give both candidates for Governor, Vahey and Coughlin, the privilege of the platform for ten minutes each to present their claims.

Somebody seconded the motion and Riley hesitated for a second trying to think of a way out. He finally ruled the motion out of order because the convention was merely temporarily organized. "The chair will be pleased to entertain the motion after the permanent organization."

The fuzzy part of the concession by Riley is that he wasn't chairman after the permanent organization was effected and knew, of course, that he would not be. Dr. Sullivan consented to withdraw the motion, but announced for the benefit of all within hearing that Mayor Coughlin was in the fight to the finish and that a majority of delegates outside of Boston. "There will have to be a vote on the nomination for Governor," declared Dr. Sullivan.

Springfield Tactics.

Springfield Convention tactics were in evidence while Chairman Riley was delivering his speech outside the hall there suddenly appeared at 12:15 a number of young men with big batches of credentials which they distributed to Boston men. They had given out a large number when the Coughlin managers discovered the game. They made a big protest to the distributors and were rebuked. The Coughlin men charged that the State Committee was trying to pack the convention for Vahey. The credentials committee reported 812 delegates present, but a generous count would place the number of delegates in the hall at 600.

A resolution on the death of Governor Johnson of Minnesota was introduced by Congressman and unanimously adopted.

When Permanent Chairman Thomas P. Hamlin entered the hall there was uproarious cheering and applause. Meantime, somebody told the leader of the band that Hamlin was going to make a speech of 10,000 words, and he ordered the band to play "We won't go home until morning."

As Mr. Hamlin started to speak a lusty lunged delegate shouted "Why don't you run for Governor?"

"Hurray, that's the stuff," shouted several delegates. When he had concluded he was given an ovation.

Riley Attacks Draper.

Thomas P. Riley, the temporary chairman, said:

"Parties today have to deal with matters affecting the corporations, the professional politicians, capital and labor and class legislation. The right and wrong in the great majority of these matters is obvious. The men who are in the wrong are those who are classed and tied to the machine of the Republican party. The men who control the machine are not leaders but drivers, and they are subsidized by capital for special interests. The Lower Branch of our Legislature is composed of subservient drivers. There is a crowd of ignorant followers, led by leaders of the third and fourth stamps who register the will of their masters. I will never their party's name in public.

"To pass the railroad holding bill men went through our corridors waving the golden wand and no one could get through the corridors without nothing the thoroughfare and evidence of corruption. As to Draper, his attitudes on the gas bill and the telegraph filling bill are contradictory. Either his contention in the one case or the other is fraud or he utters an opinion on the telegraph bill was a lying opinion. Either his position on the street-lamp bill was wrong and shows his attitude towards labor."

Hamlin for Income Tax.

Charles S. Hamlin, permanent chairman, said:

"The Democracy of Massachusetts believes in an income tax, but I hope no possible construction of the income tax would make the national government tax the securities of the States and subdivisions, as also the income derived by the States and subdivisions from their own property. The question of tariff revision has not been settled, and the campaign should be waged upon it.

Mr. Hamlin then quoted from the tariff platforms, showing how the tariff had been revised upwards. He continued:

"Although this is not a national election, the tariff question is of such overwhelming importance that it is the one preeminent issue which should be pressed upon all voters in the coming election. I wish the whole contest could be fought upon this one issue. All those who desire relief from present unjust burdens of taxation must cast their vote for the candidate nominated by our party, and if he be faithfully supported he will carry our standard to victory."

BANISHES BRANDY FROM AMBULANCES

CHICAGO, Sept. 30. An order was issued by Chief of Police Steward today decreeing that henceforth ambulances and patrol wagons shall carry spirits of any description. Hot water and lemon will be substituted instead of brandy. "I think the ammonia will look better than the brandy," explained Chief Steward, with the flicker of a smile. "The brandy is sometimes gone by the time an ambulance crew reaches its destination."

FATAL MINE EXPLOSION.

PENNSYLVANEY, Pa., Sept. 30.—One man was torn to pieces and two others injured, one perhaps fatally, in an explosion at the Fordham mine, No. 7, of the Berwind-White Coal and Iron Company, three miles west of here.

KEEFE OWN LAWYER; PUZZLES THE COURT

Albert Keefe, a produce dealer at No. 63 Fulton street, summoned before Judge Murray today on a charge of having barrels of decayed vegetables in front of his store, acted as his own lawyer and told the court that part of Fulton street has been accepted by the city. Judge Murray then ordered the case until to-morrow when he expects to have several city officials in the court room.

HALF OF BACKBONE CUT AWAY; LIVES

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30.—James Tonright, twenty-one, lies on an ash mattress in the Hahnemann Hospital with a half of his spinal vertebrae cut away and with his spinal cord covered only by a thin layer of skin. He fell from a fourth story of a building. His vertebrae was shattered and from the waist down he was paralyzed. The complete success of the operation is a surgical triumph.

TELEGRAPH WIRES UP.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 30.—Owing to increased demand, the price of telegraph wire has been advanced one-eighth of one cent a pound, or $2.85 per ton, by the American Steel and Wire Company and the various independent manufacturers of this district.

HOME RULE PLANK IS DEMANDED BY GIBLIN

Alderman Thomas J. Giblin of East Boston had a very interesting experience with the Committee on Resolutions of the Democratic State Convention at the Quincy House early to-day. He submitted a "Home Rule for Boston" plank in a set of resolutions that sharply criticised the State control of the police and licensing departments of Boston. The members of the committee, it seems, and forgotten all about a home rule plank and were much obliged to Alderman Giblin for his suggestion.

The Alderman was asked to retire after he had presented his resolutions and return in ten minutes. When he returned he was told that, as he was not a member of the committee, he could not debate the questions with the committee, but was assured that the principle of home rule which he had advocated would be given a place in the platform.

Urges Crusade Against Vice.

Alderman Giblin told the committee that the annual report of the Watch and Ward Society, made public yesterday, told a story of rank favoritism on the part of the Boston Licensing Board and gross neglect on the part of the high police officials to deal with lumosphilia. He Alderman wanted the committee to say, in a plank, that the election of a Democratic Governor would mean a crusade against vice in Boston and an investigation of the departments that have been indicted in the report of the Watch and Ward Society. He declared that it was not fair to the honest members of the police department to allow such statements of non-enforcement of the law as the Watch and Ward Society had made to go unchallenged, and that it was unfair to the liquor dealers who conduct their business in lawful and decent manner to tolerate a licensing board that would find the Hotels Nome and Piscopo guilty of violations of their franchises and still allow them to continue in business without being punished.

Only Justice to Majority.

The resolutions of Alderman Giblin declared that when the ordinary policeman is charged with a breach of duty he is tried and, if convicted, punished; that the ordinary saloonkeeper is made to suffer for breaking the law, even unintentionally; and the resolutions promised that the election of a Democratic Governor would mean that the charges against high police officials would be investigated and that the licensing board would pay no favorites.

The keynote of the resolutions was that the policy of State rule of Boston was responsible for the improper conditions existing in this city and that the Democratic party, true to the traditions of Jeffersonian Democracy, committed itself to work for Home Rule for all municipalities.

CHIN BOW PAYS $25 FOR GETTING ANGRY

Chin Bow, a hard working laundryman at No. 152 Bryant street, Malden, paid $25 and costs because he lost his temper. Chin was ironing shirts when several boys threw dirt on them. Chin chased them out of his shop with a revolver and when he got outdoors fired the gun. Policeman Lenehan told Judge Sweetser in the Malden court that Chin had shot into the crowd, so he was fined.

More Speed for Cars.

The board now fixes the speeds at twelve and twenty miles, respectively.

Aliments of Men Happily Overcome

SUCCESSFULLY TREED BY MANY.

Undoubtedly the following prescription will work wonders for that great class of men who, through dissipation of their natural strength, find themselves in their "second childhood" long before the time score and ten allotted to life's journey is run. Judgment are needed.

It is powerful, yet safe, to be infallible, and highly efficient to quickly restoring to "nervous exhaustion," weak vitality, melancholia and the functions of life.

First get fifty cents' worth of compound fluid, lubrayed (it is a one-ounce package), and three ounces syrup sarsaparilla compound; take home, mix and let stand two hours; then get one ounce compound tincture cardamon and one ounce tincture cardamon compound; combine and take a teaspoonful after each meal and one when retiring, following it up with a glass of water.

By mixing it at home as men need be the wiser as to nature's shortcomings, and expensive cures are avoided.

Lack of poise and vigor in men is a constant source of embarrassment to many, and the public least suspects it. For the benefit of those who want a quick attention to full, bounding health, and all the hereditary drags whatever. Mix it at home and no one will be the wiser as to your affliction.

WANTED: FOUR CHINAMEN FOR REAL ACTORS

WANTED.

Four men of China to take part in the performance of "The Patriot" at the Hollis Street Theatre next week. No experience required. Good pay. Apply stage door, Hollis Street Theatre, 1 o'clock. Monday afternoon.

Handbills containing this notice in Chinese characters are posted all over Boston's Chinatown. And they mean just what they say, too. Four Chinamen can earn the pay for a few minutes' appearance on the stage in the Nevada mining town scene of "The Patriot," which opens at the Hollis next Monday evening.

Usually the house supplies the "supes" for shows, but when William Collier, the star of the play, hired Albert Strassman, his manager, to get four real Chinatown and Strassman casually requested the Hollis people to do it, they replied:

"Better tackle that yourself—you'll find it a pretty good job."

So Strassman sauntered into Chinatown and tried to hire four men. The first thing he found was that the Boston Chinamen were all making so much money that the pay of $1 a night for a few minutes' work did not appeal to them. Many to whom he talked said:

"No time—too busy."

Then Strassman hit on the idea of getting up a handbill. He got hold of some of the educated Chinamen and they started to write it. But when it came to the name of the play, "The Patriot," they were stuck. There was no Chinese word at their tongue's end to express it.

"You know," explained Strassman, "Washington—Washington!"

"Aya—father—father," they cried.

"No patriot man who loves his country —Lincoln," patiently explained the theatrical man.

Finally they found a word which they assured Strassman means "Patriot." And he hopes it does.

The Chinamen are to report to Frank H. Westerman, the stage manager of the show, which will reach here next Monday morning.

PEARY'S SHIP ROOSEVELT ANCHORS IN NEW YORK BAY

Arctic Craft Given Deafening Welcome from Harbor Craft As She Makes Home Port.

Peary Tells American by Phone He Is Undecided Whether He Will Take Part In Parade.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The steamer Roosevelt, upon which Commander Robert E. Peary started on his successful trip to the North Pole, arrived here to-day under command of Captain Bartlett and was greeted in the lower bay with a chorus of whistles from the other steamships.

Shortly after reaching Sandy Hook the Roosevelt dropped anchor and the steamships passing were frantic in their welcome. Herbert L. Bridgman, secretary of the Peary Arctic Club, was immediately commandeered with Captain Bartlett. As the weather beaten hull rocked at anchor many chartered tugs and steamers took passengers down the bay to get a first glimpse of the craft. Captain Bartlett expects Commander Peary to come from Portland to command the Roosevelt in the river parade to-morrow.

The Roosevelt did not look so trim as she did when she departed for the North, July 1, 1908. Her hull was battered and scarred by contact with the Ice Floes, and rust-rigging was stained by the Arctic seas. However the vessel was not injured seriously and as she rocked at anchor there was nothing unseaworthy about her.

It was decided to have the vessel remain at anchor in the bay until to-morrow morning. Then she will proceed up through the Narrows and Hudson, to the starting point of the naval parade and take part. Afterward the Roosevelt will return and anchor at the foot of Twenty-fourth street.

A long distance conversation with Commander Robert E. Peary in his room in the New Falmouth Hotel, Portland, Me.)

"Is this Commander Peary?"

"Yes."

"Commander, this is the BOSTON AMERICAN. We have just received a despatch informing us that your steamship, the Roosevelt, arrived in New York this morning. Are you going to New York to take part in the naval parade on your steamship?"

"I don't know what my plans will be. I have received no word from the Roosevelt as yet. I can make no announcement as to my plans until I learn officially that the Roosevelt is in New York."

"What will you do when you learn from New York that your vessel is there?"

"I do not know myself. Everything depends upon circumstances. I cannot tell what I will do until I hear from New York."

COOK ATTACKED IN REGARD TO MT. M'KINLEY CLIMB

With the intention of testing the reputation of Dr. Cook, the explorer, for veracity, the North Pole controversy was watched off to-day to the ascent of Mount McKinley, Alaska, which Dr. Cook claimed to have made in 1906, but which has been doubted in some quarters. Dr. Cook will be in Boston to-morrow to give his third American lecture.

Pending an investigation of this Mount McKinley adventure, the Explorers' Club in New York, has declared off a banquet which was to have been given Dr. Cook. Commander Peary is at the head of this club and Dr. Cook is a former president. At Gloucester Professor Ralph S. Tarr of Cornell University has shed some new light on this reported ascent of Mount McKinley. He had previously written to Herbert L. Bridgman of Brooklyn, secretary of the Peary Arctic Club, on the subject.

"I found while in Alaska," he said "that out of perhaps forty persons whom I met, men who were engineers or scientists, not one credited the story of the ascension of Mt. McKinley by Dr. Cook. In fact, the claim was regarded more in the light of a joke for tenderfoot consumption, of the nature which the bluff Westerner likes to impose on the unlimited stranger.

"This doubt gathered additional force in my mind from the fact that Captain Armstrong of Seattle, one of the Cook expedition, told me that Ed. Barrill, whose present address is Hamilton, Mont., who sold to have climbed Mt. McKinley with Dr. Cook, informed him, Armstrong, that they never got above 5,000 feet and that the claim that they had attained the summit was in the nature of a joke.

"I know Captain Armstrong well and have every confidence in his word and reliability and he is absolutely positive that Barrill told him they never ascended to the summit of Mount McKinley.

"Dr. Cook has brought no proof in corroboration of this fact, and he admits that his instruments were not of a capacity to have measured the mountain. It is inconceivable that he did not take a camera with him, as this would furnish the best of evidence. When the Duke of the Abruzzi climbed Mount St. Elias also he brought down photographic evidence of that feat, which left no doubt as to its accomplishment.

"In fact, the claim of Dr. Cook as to his having scaled Mt. McKinley is everywhere scouted in Alaska. I have only quoted that some press association or other has got up affidavit from Barrill as to whether or not the story is true or untrue. While this would not settle the matter absolutely in the minds of some, it would nevertheless be more or less corroborative."

GREAT COMET COMING MAY 19

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 30.—The tail of Halleys comet will sweep across the sky as the earth's orbit on May 19, 1910, according to an announcement made here to-day by Frank E. Seagrave, the astronomer, who has been revising his recent calculations. On this day in May the comet will reach the plane of the earth's orbit. The tail of the comet will spread out fan-like over the earth's orbit, and the world will find itself swept by a curious "star dust" brought from millions and millions of miles away. After this one day sweep across our sky the planet plunges out of our region again, not to return for seventy-six years.

Mr. Seagrave is considered by the world's scientists as the leading student of comets, and his figures on Halley's comet have been accepted by American and foreign astronomers as the most authoritative data made so far. Mr. Seagrave conferred with Harvard astronomers this week and verified his figures.

"I need no be fear when we see the planet," said Mr. Seagrave. "It can do the earth no harm as it will be 12,000 miles away from us."

Professor Edwin B. Frost and his corps of assistants at Yerkes Observatory, Williams Bay, Wis., have taken a reproduction photograph of Halley's comet.

It is the first in the United States and it is believed the first in the world secured since the return of this heavenly visitor on which the comet can be seen with the naked eye.

SAM LANGFORD BIG FAVORITE

By TAD.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—If ever there was a popular fighter in the eyes of English sports Samuel Langford of Boston is that man. The mighty chap that soon can lower the colors of the best man that ever lived, and declare now that he is the only man in the world who can beat Jack Johnson.

True, Sam has won many an easy battle on English soil, and true again he has won many an easy one over here, and if J. A. K. Johnson ever intends making the British sports believe that he is a real champ he will have to beat Sammy again.

The London Sporting Life in speaking of Johnson and the man who will beat him says:

"The man who will beat Johnson will be the man who can "Kid" the Dark to get to him, for as an aggressive boxer Jeff Artha leaves much to be desired. This is painfully obvious in the Johnson-Burns pictures, for when Johnson rushed he generally missed his punch, and an ignoble scuffle was the result.

"In Jack O'Brien he met just the very man to turn the trick, did the white man but possess sufficient punching power, which he unfortunately does not. Throughout their recent six-round affair in Philadelphia O'Brien had Johnson chasing him round the ring, and a pretty hash the negro made of things, by all accounts. Jim Corbett in his prime would have been just the man to cook the Johnson goose. "It was Corbett's cleverness that gave Jeffries the fright and incidentally the title to start with, while when they clashed for the first time, Hall Sharkey and Fitzsimmons boxed to order they could not have played more completely into Jeffries' hand. Their very aggressiveness and willingness was their undoing. But when Corbett faced Jeffries it was a case of two men playing the same game, with Corbett incalculably the best player. Jeffries woke up to this unpleasant fact quite early in the first round, and thereafter, with the left jab the boilermaker whipped a left hook to the jaw in the twenty-third round there was a fight royal game of hide-and-seek played all around the Corbett island ring.

"But alas! Corbett is slumbering upon the back-town bench, and in any case it will take more than a pugilistic Rip Van Winkle to tear the laurels from the Johnson negro's brow.

"There is just one man in all the world who might do it, and for that man Johnson has no kind of use. We refer to Sam Langford. Langford is a boxer of great adaptability and can box either aggressively or defensively, as circumstances demand. He has improved out of all recognition since he clashed with his fellow black, and should they ever meet again those who wish to back Johnson will find no difficulty in being accommodated."

GOLF GOSSIP
NEWS OF THE LINKS

Rain has been a larger factor than usual this week in stopping golf tournaments. The professional match at Brae Burn was also the new date of Wednesday, October 6. The women golfers at Brae Burn and Allston postponed their matches until Friday.

Jerome D. Travers, the former national champion and New York golfer, will not play with the team that goes to Europe to represent that State this year in the Lesley Cup matches at Philadelphia. He is a power in himself and will be sorely missed by the Metropolitan players, but for J. Travis will as usual captain the team from that State, while the Massachusetts team will be led by Harold H. Wilder, the old Harvard champ and captain.

It is rather too bad, with an association having several hundred golfers in its midst, can not turn out a larger field than twelve for its annual championship tournament.

With the holding of the Oakley Club's open tournament the middle of October, the open tournaments are classed for the year, and it is perhaps safe to say that this season more tournaments have been held, and also that they have been more successful in this section of the country and in the good time realized by the players. The season opened in May with a four-day tournament at the Wollaston Golf Club, and when the last event has been run off thirty-two open strings will be the total number for this season.

Enthusiasts are waiting for the postponed professional match between the Ross brothers and T. D. McNamara and W. J. Brady to come off. Next Wednesday is the date set for the contest, and provided there is not another flood the retarded match will be a reality.

CROSS COUNTRY RUN DRAWS RUNNERS

The ten-mile cross country run, to be a handicap, which is being conducted under the auspices of the North Cambridge Athletic Association, on next Saturday afternoon, is attracting the attention of Boston's colony of long distance runners as well as the runners who go that distance, in this vicinity, and promises to be a stellar event in the long distance game.

Entries will close Tuesday with C. A. Tupper, North Cambridge Junction, for all athletes that are registered.

BOSTON ROVERS ARE LEADING THE LIST

With three wins to their credit, the Boston Rovers still lead the pack in the Boston and District Association football combination, and while in their game with Somerville at Franklin Park, Saturday, the Rovers' defence was pierced for two goals, yet its goal average is a long way ahead of any other in the league. The team has now defeated Clan McPherson of Lawrence, Lynn City and Somerville. With the exception of Brockton and Somerset, each team in the series has been able to win a game.

Considerable interest is being shown in the match Saturday at Roslindale between the champions and the Pilgrim Americans. This is the first time the teams have met this season in the league series, and the American managers are training a team that is said to be able to take the measure of the champions.

BANQUET FOR COONEY FROM ROXBURY PALS

Roxbury's rugged recruit in the Boston Nationals baseball camp, William A. Cooney, for whom Fred Clarke of Pittsburg's chaises offered $2,000 and two players recently, will be given a banquet and testimonial at Arbeiter Hall, on October 19 next, by his old Roxbury High School friends and neighbors.

All of the old Marcella street ground champions who played with Cooney, will be there.

Later, when Madden and Cooney go South this Winter, another big dinner will be given the two Roxbury players.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 30.—At a meeting of the National Baseball Commission arranged the schedule for the coming world's series between Pittsburg and Detroit and promulgated rules to govern the championship games. The rules:

"In case either one or both the games scheduled for Pittsburg on Friday, October 8, or Saturday, October 9, are not played on account of rain or any other cause, then each postponed game shall be played after the Pittsburg club returns from Detroit, provided, however, that the Pittsburg club shall be required to remain in the city of Detroit until the first two games scheduled in that city shall be played.

"In case it becomes necessary to play a seventh game, the city in which it is to be played will be determined by the Commission as is provided for by Rule 9, and at the time designated by supplemental Rule No. 4.

"In case four and one-half innings of any scheduled game are not played tickets sold for such games will be good for the day on which such postponed game shall be played, as announced in the public press.

"At Detroit—Box seats, reserved $2 (on account of limited capacity); grand stand, reserved, $2 (on account of limited capacity); pavilion, $1.50 (on account of limited capacity); bleacher seats and overflow, 50 cents.

"The public is cautioned by the National Commission against paying any higher prices than those fixed in the above schedule. Every effort will be made on the part of the Commission to prevent ticket scalping, and the license granted in the ticket will be revoked if they are found in the hands of scalpers.

SCRAP TONIGHT AT LAWRENCE

There's a lot scrap on the boards at Lawrence to-night when Fighting Dick Nelson meets Bobby Wilson, the tough Canadian champion lightweight, and the United A. C. will be the Mecca of the ring fans.

Bob Warner, who is touting Wilson, says that his protege will put Nelson away inside the limit or fifteen rounds and if he does he will get all the gravy, as Nelson, the Dane, is one of the hardest nuts to crack in the game.

The winner has been promised a match with the victor of the Young Corbett-Dave Deshler bout at the Armory A. A. and Wilson wants another chance at the Connecticut boy, as he claims he would have beaten the conqueror of Terry McGovern only for the oxygen trick he played on him when they met last Winter.

JOE FRANZ MAKES WILLOUGHBY HUSTLE

Joe Franz of Toledo met defeat at the hands of Walter Willoughby in the wrestling match at the Columbia last night, but he made the Cleveland boy go some to get the decision. It was one of the severest matches ever seen in this city, and the fans almost went wild over the speedy work of both men.

The latter is a fierce chunk, but was handicapped by Willoughby's height, reach and ringcraft. Each was wary of the other, Willoughby taking no chances with his man after the initial matching up, as the little fellow had an eye for the opening, and was as shifty as a tiger. After the match Willoughby said that he had to be careful, as his opponent was as strong as a bull and clever too.

The first fall went to Willoughby in twenty-nine minutes with a hard arbelest and armlock, and he also won the second fall in twenty minutes after a similar hold. Willoughby seems to have gained in speed and cleverness since last year, and last night was a veritable eclipse.

Next week Carl Anderson, instructor at Harvard and ex-amateur middleweight champion, will meet Willoughby in a finish match. It will be worth going miles to see.

Nothing succeeds like circulation. The AMERICAN has quantity and quality.

STANTON TO MEET O'BRIEN AT SALEM

The well balanced card of boxing promised the members of the Quincy Club of Salem last Monday night was highly gratifying and from present indications there promises to be a most successful season enjoyed at the spacious rink this Winter.

The members left the rink convinced that the club is on a firm footing and were highly pleased with the new form of affairs and the manner in which the show was conducted and put on.

That the members are interested in the bouts that are held at Salem could be plainly understood, for with the pour of humanity that came out of the rink crowds of the season attended and were well repaid with a well conducted and first-class boxing entertainment.

The card for Monday night will have two featherweights, Freddie Hicks of Salem meeting Joe Stanton, the hard hitting little California boy, in the feature event of twelve rounds.

The matchmaker promises to secure bouts in every division and is negotiating now for a heavyweight match that will prove a hummer.

DOVES' CATCHER HAS SOME CLASS

Of Rairden, the new Boston catcher, the Canton News says: "Few of the 3,000 fans realized that they were witnessing the final game of Catcher Rairden in the O. & P. League Sunday. While he was performing behind the bat in the game with East Liverpool, Owner Dovey was striding a check, payable to the Canton Baseball Club, for Rairden's services.

Manager Smith of the Boston team thought so well of the work of Rairden in the game Sunday that he recommended his purchase to Owner Dovey, who immediately went to the box office where President Yost and Secretary Hostitter were and closed he deal.

It is a record transaction. An hour before the purchase Catcher Dovey or Smith knew anything about Canton's great catcher.

It was a case of well merited promotion. Rairden is the most popular ball player that ever wore a Canton uniform, and in all the time he has been with the Canton team he has been free from any knocks from the fans, which is a rare thing for a player.

DOVE'S MURPHY GETS FINE OF $500

CINCINNATI, Sept. 30.—After promulgating rules to govern the world's baseball championship series, the National Baseball Commission vigorously criticized President Charles W. Murphy of the Chicago National League club, and imposed a fine of $500 against the Chicago club.

This action was taken on a protest filed by the Toronto club of the Eastern League and was based on an alleged attempt by President Murphy to "coax away" Player Pfeffer from the Toronto team. The fine is to be applied as damages in favor of the Toronto club.

CRIMSON ELEVEN LOOK GOOD FOR A WINNING SEASON

STRAIGHT DOPE FOR SPORT FANS

DID YOU SEE THAT LOOP RUN await of Sam Crawford's in the first game yesterday? It sure was a hummer—cleared the Durham bull by forty feet, according to the way I saw it, although Pa Stewart, who has an eagle eye, says the distance was but thirty-two feet. I wonder what would have happened to Parker Crandall's instructive noggin if the sphere had landed square on his head. I'll lay a small wager that it would have got that baby good and it sure's no sell.

MR. DINIE KID, WHO WAS IN THE receiving line at Mr. Sou. Langford's soiree at the Armory the other night, left Boston yesterday for New York. Before departing he gave out the following interview, which those who attended the reception will admit is lucid and convincing:

JOHNNY LYNCH AND EDDIE CARR are to mix to-night at Lowell and according to the busy press agent of the club, one ever he may be, the bout is for the bantam championship of New England. This listens well and helps get out a crowd, but how about Jimmy Walsh and the bantam Jimmy is the best bantam I know at present and as he has never been defeated at the weight limit, according to my dope that title looks pretty good after this name. The claims of a lot of the managers of bantams savor largely of jokes. Lynch and Carr are good boys, but I'm strong for Jimmy until some other boy at 115 pounds jars him loose from the championship.

AT THE REQUEST OF A NUMBER OF readers of this column I am going to name an earnest appeal to Fred Lake to have Bill Carrigan and Pat Donahue remove those shin guards when they go to bat. Everyone admits they are highly ornamental at all times and mighty useful at frequent intervals, but what's the use of wearing them out. If Manager Lake needs any help, one of my correspondents volunteers to roll the Red Sox catchers around on that skinned place in front of the players' bench and hold them while Lake removes the leg coverings, and let me tell you that the volunteer is a big husky guy who performs every day weeks at the Armory. We're waiting for Lake now.

ON THE SQUARE, WHAT DO YOU think of a fan who is so narrow minded that he gets sore when the crowd applauds Ty Cobb for a brilliant play? I met such one at the game yesterday and I'm thinking seriously of changing my seat if he's near me to-day. I don't know but what a letter might would be nice. I smell how to swat him three times on the knob with a stocking full of cottage cheese. I am going to think this over.

SOME TIME AGO CHARLEY MURphy, owner of the Cubs, declared he was going to advocate a movement for the establishment of a school for umpires. Now I see the National Commission has responded and fixed him $500 for tampering with a player belonging to another club. How about that school for umpires, I suggested, with Murphy as the prize pupil?

C. R. G., SOMERVILLE—I CAN GIVE you little advice as to how to construct an aeroplane, although I'll admit I do go up in the air occasionally. I'm not very much up on aviation. Better write to Glenn Curtiss or the Wright brothers. They are the nippest men I know. If you can't get to them you might see Old Man Nero too, who is something of a minor league aviator himself.

LISTEN TO THIS FROM EX-ALDERman Fred Finigan, who is some fan, Joseph Fred: "If it were possible to have Nash Cooney, the new pitching recruit of the Boston Nationals and Danny Madden of the Americans as a battery with the regular Red Sox team behind them, I'll bet $500 that they could lick any team in either league, Detroit or Pittsburg not excepted." All of which is going some, but there isn't much danger of Finigan having to put up that bet. Perhaps the fact that both boys were constituents of Finigan's before he had "Ex" put before his name may account for his enthusiasm.

EDWARD H. BOGAN, 8 KING ST., Roxbury—Why tarry so long about getting that football stuff in? Your game was played Saturday and your letter came Tuesday, which makes it ancient history by the time it reaches me. Come again, only come along earlier.

Straight Dope, BOSTON AMERICAN—
Am very much in sympathy with the position you take in regard to the action of Tom and Ty Cobb's side of it, as indicated in your column of the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day.

It is quite true that the majority of the "fans" only see such plays as Cobb makes the way they generally do, but I think that is all the more the players ought to be grateful for the opportunity to show their wonderful ability, instead of going out of their way to do something most of this sort of thing every season and are accomplishing a great deal, very truly,
SH 50, Boston, St. M. M. CORY.

Thanks, Mr. Cory. It's quite a relief I assure you, to get an expression from a man who is fairer minded than lot of those boys who have been jumping on me for the view I took of Cobb and his playing. I received several other letters on the same subject, but, judging from their tone, they were from people who have about half an inch of space between their eyes and nothing in their domes to think with. I always welcome sane and sincere criticism of anything I write, but some of the howls that come in are really close to the gaudy limit.

Owing to cancellation, the Gate of Heaven Club is without a game for Saturday, Oct. 5. A team desiring a game could say Gate of Heaven Club, South Boston, Mass., and address 8 p. m. Sunday. Rev. McCLUSKEY.

Straight Dope, BOSTON AMERICAN—
To settle a controversy that grew tell us if "Mull," the cartoon of Fisher, appears in the New York Journal or any other of the papers in the Boston Americans' Association? It appears one of the features in the New York Journal. It says the same pictures appear in both papers. Also, does Fisher draw for Washington or NEW HENRY CLAY. If you have the straight dope on this, as they appear simultaneously in both papers on the same day.

FLAG TO FLAG RACING DATE IS DECIDED

By J. C. KERRISON.

The definite date has been finally decided upon for the Flag to Flag endurance and reliability run from Denver to the City of Mexico. According to the revised conditions the contestants, of which there will be not less than twenty, will leave Denver Monday, November 23, and end up in the City of Mexico the week of December 13, when an automobile show will be held in the Federal district.

The entries will close on October 2 at the office of G. A. Whalgreen, donor of the trophy, No. 1,715 Stout street, Denver, Col. Official representatives must be named by November 15, and each competing car must be delivered into the custody of the committee not later than November 19.

The conditions are practically the same as those of the Glidden tour, except for the fact that there will be no technical examination at the end of the tour according to present plans.

Several entries have already been made and the prospects are exceptionally bright for a well filled event. The starting of the contest late in November assures traveling through Mexico at the most delightful climatic season after the heavy rains, when the roads are also at their best.

Barry Grant, who is to handle the Aleo for the Fairmont Park race of next week, leaves Boston on Saturday for Philadelphia, where he will go into training for the big fight with Lee Kaufman, who, yesterday, won the big event on Long Island, will commence his training for the Philadelphia races on Monday, while Lee Lort, manager of the latter, is already in Philadelphia. Since Herb Lytle met with his serious accident of yesterday and will not be in condition to drive in the Fairmount Park race, it is understood that the Apperson will be withdrawn.

Harry W. Laighton, secretary of the Chronograph Club of Boston, who had charge of the timing of the Chicago tour, has been invited to fill a similar position at Philadelphia and it is possible that he will accept that position.

JACK JOHNSON NAMES MAN TO REFEREE BOUT

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 30.—It is announced that Jack Welsh will be the referee of the Ketchel-Johnson fight, October 12, if is stated further that the selection was made at the time the articles were signed in New York and that Welsh was Johnson's one and only choice for the position. The story goes that Johnson would have refused to sign unless the selection of Welsh had been ratified at the time.

The choice is a good one and will find favor with the sporting men. In addition to being a thoroughly fair and square fighting game, Welsh is a determined, self-reliant fellow who will stand no fooling.

Betting has started up with Johnson a ten-to-six favorite. The price against ketchel is ten to four, and even money is offered that Ketchel will not last twelve rounds.

The impression still prevails that there may be a change in the date of the contest, but Johnson stated definitely last night that he would not be a party to any postponement.

"I have signed to fight Ketchel on October 12 and I will meet him on the fight taking place on that date," said the champion.

HARVARD GIVES PROMISE OF A SCORING TEAM

No wonder O'Flaherty was "nervous" For weeks the students at Harvard, and the good people of South Boston, have been lying awake nights to tell one another how Cutler's successor at quarterback for Harvard was going to cause to be forgotten such names as Rockwell, Witham, Daly, McCormack and a few more.

In the newspapers O'Flaherty has been "boomed," too. He deserved it. O'Flaherty is a football player. But he was unable to prove it while Harvard was opening her season with Bates at the Stadium.

And now he will be over-blamed very likely. For example, O'Flaherty's wonder work with the forward pass (spiral toss) has been an interesting ante-season theme. Now, yesterday his doleful and oddly-smeared attempt to launch a forward pass was a failure, more through McKay's failure to block his Bates opponent than it was O'Flaherty's to shoot the ball quickly.

More fault could be found justly with the quarter's nervous manner of giving signals, his handling of the ball from centre, and his failure to imply the utmost confidence in the men behind him by gripping-in for a run—all these, no doubt, were effects of what they call "stage fright."

To judge this too much heralded player by what he did and did not do yesterday, when he must have felt that every eye was upon him, and that much was expected, would be most unfair and most unwise as well. It may be admitted, however, that O'Flaherty is rather too fond of play quarterback. He is naturally off balance when he plays low enough to take the pass as quarters are trained to do.

Harvard showed flashes of such football as only November and Harvard in other years. There were at least four dazzling plays in which nearly every man in crimson was with the runner, pulling, hauling, keeping the tackler off the ball and the play in forward motion. These plays, with errors by Bates, gave Harvard the game.

No one could see these plays in action, appreciate the hang and drive there was in them, and not believe that Harvard's offensive will be hard to stop.

The Crimson showed certain evidences of power and also of the ability to rally around the man with the ball. This, in itself, justifies Harvard's confidence that a "scoring team" will surely be developed. It is quite too early to feel wholly confident that the team will also be a shifty, clever football proposition, able to take advantage of opponents' mistakes, and to meet or offer a rapid-fire, open rushing and kicking game.

VANDERBILT AT BROCKTON FAIR

BROCKTON, Sept. 30.—The entry list for the horse show of the Brockton Fair, announced to-day, shows thirty exhibitors. Reginald C. Vanderbilt of New York will be here with nearly his entire stable, as will Paul A. Sise of New York, who lost a year led to the capture of blue ribbons. George Watson of New York will also show a strong string.

Edward H. Weatherbee of New York returns this year with a string of saddlers and hurdlers. Fred L. Ames, Miss Mary L. Ames and J. S. Ames of North Easton will show in the hunters' classes, and Julian Morris of Virginia and Dick Donnelly of Sea Girt, N. J., will also show large strings in these classes. Dr. A. H. Fitch of Boston will enter several in the saddle and runabout classes, and Dr. J. P. Cronin, J. H. Conlier and Harvey C. Wheeler of Boston are also among the exhibitors.

Of the Arcadian classes Homer Davenport's stable will show, and Mrs. E. J. Barker of Pembroke and Spencer Borden of Fall River have entered several good ones. Among the new exhibitors are J. E. Dale of New York, Rigby Farm of Newport; John H. Molenkr of New York, Saugatuck Farm, Babylon, L. I.; Somerset Farm, East Millstone, N. J.; Miss Mary Manning and Joseph H. Collins of Cohasset.

Judge William H. Moore, C. W. Watson of Virginia and Alfred G. Vanderbilt, who have been large exhibitors in past years, are not among the entries this year.

You see the AMERICAN everywhere—in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

JEFF IS SICK WITH BAD COLD

PARIS, Sept. 30.—James J. Jeffries, the American heavyweight fighter, is doing his work at Jim Pratt's quarters at Neuilly, on the Seine, a suburb of Paris, preparatory to his meeting with Jack Johnson, the colored champion. Jeffries' training, which began soon after he had returned from Marienbad, has been interrupted by a cold contracted while he was attending the races, and for two days the pugilist was confined to his room.

His illness is not serious, and it is expected that he will take up his training again in a day or two.

Jim Pratt, who has followed the fighters for two years, considers Jeffries in the pink of condition. "Jeffries is as quick as lightning," he said to-day. "His waist line has fallen away practically to the normal. His weight is about 225 pounds."

Hugh Mclntosh, the fight promoter has offered $30,000 for a contest between the two heavyweights in Paris. Jeffries has refused the offer on the ground he would manageers to give sparring exhibitions.

NOTRE DAMES TO PLAY LINWOODS

In a series for the interclub championship of Roxbury, the Notre Dame A. C. will clash with the fast Linwood A. C. at Marcella street grounds on Saturday next. Captain Barney Donovan will work Johnny Pearl and White, for Linwood, against Steve Rodgers, one of the best right hand twirlers around Boston, with Alonzo White catching for the Notre Dames.

A REAL COAT FRONT

Do YOU know what a NEWMAN-MADE coat front is? Just a second—

A Newman-made coat front is not merely a manufactured front which can be bought by the gross and slapped onto a coat. A Newman-made front is HAND MADE to conform to the full or flat chest PERFECTLY. It is moulded along symmetrical lines and THEN THE CLOTH IS SHRUNKEN and PERFECTLY LAID OVER THE COAT FRONT. It cannot break—yet it is FLEXIBLE—IT DOES NOT CURL, and the COLLAR HUGS THE NECK. It is generally conceded by those who know BY ACTUAL EXPERIENCE that the $20 Newman-made Suit or Overcoat is difficult to duplicate elsewhere at $30.

The Bill Clerk Shows the Way to Prosperity

By KENNETT HARRIS

"THAT puts me on Easy street—for the time being," observed the bill clerk, as he folded the green-back the cashier had given him and tucked it away in his waistcoat pocket.

"It allows you to stroll along the side-walk, as it were, I presume," said the cashier. "It doesn't permit you to linger. You're not to keep moving until you come to Poverty avenue again and then pass through that thoroughfare to Bankruptcy court. Why don't you try to get on Easy street to stay?"

"There's too particular about their neighbors there," replied the bill clerk.

"Not so much as you might suppose," said the cashier. "Of course, if nothing will do you but a three-bedroom granite and marble mansion with a garage, it's a different matter, but there are some very nice little residences on Easy street at quite a moderate price."

"How much?" asked the bill clerk. "Get down to cases. Your idea of a moderate price might be different from mine. It's like moderate drinking."

How to Get a Home.

"Generally speaking, it would cost you industry and self-denial, my boy," answered the cashier. "At the same time you can make your home there without either of those qualities and with very little exertion, so there's no need of your being discouraged."

"In view of recent favors, I will content myself with short contempt," said the bill clerk. "You're entitled to make $5 worth of lasting remarks with impunity. I'd like to know how to break in without exertion, though."

"It's perfectly plain and ridiculously simple," returned the cashier. "All you have to do is to make other people exert themselves for you. Look around you carefully and find a few persons of exceptional ability and dynamic energy and employ them. You can allow them a small percentage on the money they make for you, and they will be perfectly happy and content. Nineteen-twentieths of my Easy street neighbors were boosted in by a lot of unimportant dubs who never expect to leave Poverty avenue themselves."

"You live there, too, do you?" asked the bill clerk.

"In a modest sort of way—yes," replied the cashier. "I don't entertain lavishly, but I've there just the same. I had my furniture moved to by the industry and self-denial route, working steadily till through office hours and limiting myself to half a grape fruit at breakfast without any sherry in it."

"How do you get people of exceptional ability to work for you?" asked the bill clerk.

"Ask the boss, don't ask me," answered the cashier. "I think you have to acquire some exceptional ability yourself to start with. There are other ways still, however."

"Yes?" said the bill clerk, inquiringly.

"Certainly," said the cashier. "If you will look in the 'Lost and Found' column, you will find there that there are more articles lost than are found. To a logical mind, there is only one conclusion, and that is that property of value, ranging from Boston bull terriers to 6-karat diamonds, is daily being dropped in the walks, left in railway carriages, street cars, theatres, hotel bedrooms and taxicabs. All you have to do is to find the property. No special skill is demanded of you, but a hard work. You merely stroll around in likely places and when you see an unattached pocketbook containing a vast sum of money you pick it up and pocket it; the same with diamonds, priceless solder, handbags containing important documents, and gold cigarette cases. If you have good eyes and luck, you ought to do pretty well."

"That's a very bright idea," commented the bill clerk, sarcastically. "What's the matter with strolling over to the end of the rainbow and picking up the pot of money that's waiting for you there?"

The Rainbow Trail.

"A good many people do that," said the cashier. "I can call to mind several dreamy eyed men who set out on the rainbow trail. Sensible, hard headed neighbors would tell them that they were on a fool's errand, but they didn't seem to care. They just kept their dreamy eyes on the rainbow and red and yellow and green kept trudging on. And the hard-headed people said, 'Too bad, isn't it?' and after a while the dreamy eyed ones came trudging home again with a big crock of gold mine gold under each arm, and the hard headed people said, 'See! bless my soul, who'd have thought it?'"

"Honest, I believe you are getting nutty," said the bill clerk. "You make an analogy as clear as mud."

"I should be sorry to cause you any anxiety," said the cashier. "How about persuading a sufficient number of voters to elect you to an entirely unnecessary office with a handsome salary and a big graft attached? That isn't impractical, is it?"

"I don't know that it would be if I didn't have a conscience," replied the bill clerk. "As it is, though, I'm disqualified. I take it a little person eligible if he were strictly necessary, but I draw the line that side of politics. But what's the use of worrying as long as you've got money in your pocket? Spend it, dodest and, after all, is just to ask some easy mark to slip it to you until you dopy."

"Don't make me regret it more than I do already, Johnny," said the cashier, reproachfully.

Up-to-Date Jokes

He had been calling at intervals for five years, and one night when he and the young lady were seated in a secluded corner of the drawing room the front door bell rang.

"Oh, bother!" cried the young man; "better tell the servant you are out."

"Shall I not tell her to say I'm engaged?" asked the girl shyly. And before another quarter of an hour had passed she was. . . .

Mrs. P.—I had a dozen proposals before yours. All from smarter men than you, too.

Mr. P.—They must have been. How did they manage to get out of marrying you?

"Your daughter piped off the Party Sunday in one of them mayonnaise dresses," said the "Lit" guard. "She was a peach, all right."

"That's the first time I've heard of a peach with mayonnaise dressing!" remarked Young-Man-Afraid-of-His-Wife, dryly.

"Oh, well, you know what I mean," explained Billy, "one of them all-in-one goes with the waist and skirt bought together like they was the work of a union operator. But what gets me, Kiddo, is the way they slants off to follow the straight an' narrow path, then all of a sudden has a change of heart an' flops into a spread-eagle insult of fluffy ruffles. Ain't they the coy things, though?"

"Personally I would call them the last straw if I wasn't morally certain that there was a whole haystack of last straws still standing fashions yet to come," said Young-Man-Afraid-Of-His-Wife.

"Women's styles are the most changeable things in the world except women. Last year the medium fry awoke at nights trying to figure how she could best require all the beautiful lines of a lead pencil, and this year she's trying to herself to resemble the hide of a Coney Island walrus, with so many curves in the general outline that it makes you seasick to look at it.

"And speaking of these Mayen-age dresses, take it from me, Billy, it would be easier to teach a bunch of chinee to play pinochle than to tell what a woman means by what she says. When our fair neighbor next door appeared in one of these lulliest creations, the madame stood at the window and took in every detail of the new model.

"What a disgraceful exhibition,' she said. 'How can a woman have so little sense of the fitness of things as to appear in any such costume?'

"There aren't any flies on the fitness of the thing as far as I can see,' I ventured. 'On the contrary, it strikes me that it fits not weakly, but too well.'

"And her shape!' persisted the madame relentlessly. 'Grace revealing that much ever sensual into such a narrow compass! Why, a creature who would pitifully appear in a thing like that is certainly lost to all sense of modesty.' In fact, I shall hesitate to recognize Mrs. Smith-Jones after this, as you know the old adage, 'Tell me who you see and I'll tell you who you are,' and the woman who would wear a gown like that is decidedly bad form.'

"I didn't say anything Billy, but it occurred to me that she'd have to be good form and all there to properly fill the requirements of that particular kind of a thing in closer-than-a-brother arrangement.

"Believe it or not, but two days later the madam met Mrs. Smith-Jones in front of our doorway and accosted her in just these terms: 'You dear thing! How perfectly sweet you looked in your new Mayen-age gown. I never saw a more stunning fit, and really it has quite decided me how to have my new Fall suit made up. John fell in love with yours, and simply insisted on my having mine modeled along the same lines. Didn't you, dear?'

"And by the wat of the week Mamehaha appeared all enmeshed in one of those plan for-ease arrangements.

"'What do you think of my new gown, John?' she asked, presenting before me for inspection.

"'Why, you—er—seem to be all there, my dear,' I replied, 'but I thought you objected to this style of dress as—er—lacking modesty?'

Billy Knows It, Too

"'The very idea, John! you're getting to be a perfect prig,' she expostulated. 'Of course, I did say the other day that Mrs. Smith-Jones had nerve to wear such a costume with her figure, but I flatter myself that I am not as devoid of contour as a squash pie.'

"'Besides, these dresses are all the rage, and you certainly are inconsiderate to expect me to go around in passe styles just because you object to a simple little thing like this. Well, I won't be governed by your prudish opinions in the matter, so there!'

"'If women ain't all alike!'' declared Billy, emphatically. "One day they are knocking a thing in a way to make Peary's hunmerin' record look like a piece of limburger, an' the next day they fall for it, harder than a bunch of hoboes for a free lunch. Take the Party, now; that other evenin' while we was swingin' 'round in a free-for-all at the Ginger Snap Social Club, she says to me with the soft pedal on, 'William,' she says, 'do you know what soul mates are?'

The Epicurean Suitor

"'Sure,' says I, 'a pair of shoes.'

"'I'm she goes higher than Orville Wright. 'Nix on the comic stuff,' she says, 'if you ain't willin' to admit that I'm your affinity we better cut out our date with the preacher.'

"'Well, Kiddo, three days afterwards she's that sore on Affinity Earle that you'd think he done her a personal injury.

"'Say, William,' she says, 'ain't this soul mate business the limit? After all, it takes a epicure to really appreciate the everyday viands in the feast of life.'

"'An' what's a epicure?' says I.

"'A fellow which knows his food before he swallows,' says the Party; 'an' it takes a epicure to choose a wife.'

"YOU! cast away your assumed character and your disguise. You relieve yourself of the false beard and the spectacles—and at that very moment the door of the section opens. Your wife, thrown into a passion of terror at the sight of Larsan's smooth, beardless face in the glass, does not wait to make any further investigation and rushes out into the night, her screams are heard by Daddy Jupin and by Mathieu. You comprehend the danger at once. You realize that everything is lost unless you can immediately arrange matters so that your wife shall see Darzac somewhere else. You quickly resume the mask; you hurry out of the compartment and reach the buffet by a shorter route than that taken by your wife, who rushes there to look for you. She finds you standing up. You have not even had time enough to seat yourself before she enters. Is everything safe now? Alas, no. Your troubles are only beginning, for the fearful thought that you may be at one and the same time both Darzac and Larsan will not leave her mind. Then the platform of the station, while passing beneath the gas jet, presents a frightened glance at you, lets go your hand and runs wildly into the office of the station master. You need not hesitate a single second and speedily the abominable idea must be banished without the slightest delay. You quit the office, leaving the lady in the care of the station master, and immediately return, closing the door quickly, seeking to give the impression that you too have been terrified.

"In order to save her mind, and, also, for the purpose of deceiving us all, in case she dared reveal her suspicions to any one, you are the first to warn me that something unforeseen has occurred and to send me a dispatch. See how clear and lucid is the day your eyes are opened! You cannot refuse to take her to rejoin her father. She would go without you. And, since nothing is yet really lost, you have the hope that everything may be regained. In the course of the journey your wife continues to have alternating periods of faith in you and of fear. She gives you her revolver, in a sort of half delirium, which might sum itself up in some such phrase as this: 'If he is Darzac, let him protect me! If he is Larsan, let him kill me!' But in pity, let me know which he is.' At Roche-Rouges, you realized once more how utterly she had withdrawn herself from you and in order to reassure her as to your identity, you showed her Larsan again. . . . See how in accordance with reason such a proceeding would be, my dear M. Darzac! Every fact would fit perfectly into every other under the supposition which I am placing before you. There is not a single point up to your appearance as Larsan at Menton, during your journey as Darzac to Nice, at the time when you came to meet us, which cannot be explained in the easiest way imaginable.

"You had taken the train at Menton-Garavan before the eyes of your friends, but you alighted from the train at the next station, which is Monte-Carlo, and there, after a short stay for the purpose of altering your looks, you appeared in the name of Larsan to the same friends who were pretending in the gardens at Menton. The following train brought you to Cannes, where you met Darzac and myself. Only as you had on this occasion the exaction of leaving from the lips of Arthur Rance when he met us at the station at Nice, the news that Mme. Darzac had not, on this occasion, confided in the name of Larsan, you were under the necessity that some evening of showing her Larsan under the very windows of the Square Tower, standing erect in the pose of Philip's limit. So, you see, at the Hotel M. Darzac, how even those things which appear most complicated, would have become entirely simple and logically explicable, if, by chance, my suspicions should have been confirmed."

At these words, I myself, who had seen and touched "the map of Australia," was unable to reproach a shudder as I looked pitifully at Robert Darzac, just as one

Sonnet

By ERIC CLOUGH TAYLOR.

FORTH from the window of my soul I sent
The Raven, Pride of Life, and Lust of the Eye.
Who, croaking, flapped to windward; nor could I
Discern at first what wasted way he went;
But he across the Lowering firmament
Flew on and on, until he could espy
Flesh on the waters borne, or stranded high;
And come not home, on carrion business bent
And all was dark, and hope was but a name,
Till at a Voice's bidding, forth from my hand
Fluttered the little pinions of a Dove,
Who long returned not, but, at last, she
Bore in the prow of Truth's limit. So, you see,
All things are Darzac, how even those things which appear most complicated, would have become entirely simple and logically explicable, if, by chance, my suspicions should have been confirmed."

At these words, I myself, who had seen and touched "the map of Australia," was unable to reproach a shudder as I looked pitifully at Robert Darzac, just as one might look at some poor man who is on the very moment when you closed the circle—the circle in which there had been found the body too many!—the time when, after having sworn that which was the truth—that you had drawn the bolt of your apartment as soon as you had entered your sleeping room, you had lied to us in picking established the possibility of guilt, the young reporter could prove Darzac's innocence.

As to Robert Darzac, after having at first evinced the deepest agitation, he had grown quite tranquil and calm, as he followed attentively to every word that escaped from my thin lips. And it seemed to me that his eyes held the same expression of astonishment, amazed and frightened, and yet full of breathless interest, which I had seen in the eyes of the accused man at the bar of the Assizes when they had heard the Procureur-General deliver one of his wonderful disquisitions which almost convinced the prisoners themselves that they were guilty of a crime which sometimes they had never committed.

"But since you no longer have these suspicions, monsieur?" he exclaimed, his intonation singularly calm, in spite of the fact that his voice was raised, "I should be glad to know, after all this exercise of your talent of reasoning, what could have driven them away?"

In order to have them driven away, monsieur, one thing was essential—an absolute certitude! And I found it—a simple and irrefutable proof which showed me in a manner complete and undeniable which of the two personalities of Darzac was, in reality Larsan. That proof, monsieur, happily, furnished me by yourself at

How Bill Did It---By James J. Montague

"HERE, here, Bill," suggested Burbage, as at beer and cheese they sat. "I've found a half-ton actor, pay him one and six a week. And you've simply got to give him some few lines that he can speak." Shakespeare scribbled for an hour on a pad upon his knee. Then he answered: "Here's a part, sir, that looks pretty good to me. I have called him Sir John Falstaff; do his lines appeal to you?" Burbage, reading, answered: "Rotten; but I guess they'll have to do."

Later, when rehearsing "Hamlet," Burbage took Bill out to lunch. "Bill," he said, "this thing is awful. Can't you give my part a punch? Show 'em Hamlet ain't so crazy that he cannot hurt the knife At the idleness of coping with the foolishness of life." "Yes," said Bill. "I'll have him tell 'em that the times are out of gear." And he wrote the passage that begins "To be, or not to be." His manager inspected it, and quoth "I wish we had The time to make this gingery. I'll pass it, but it's bad!"

One night when putting on "Macbeth" came Burbage in a rage To Shakespeare, who was sitting on a box behind the stage. "Good heavens! Shakespeare!" he exclaimed, "this piece will die the death Unless you give some decent lines to help out poor Macbeth!" "All right," said Shakespeare, rising with a nod, dejected air. "How's this? Er—sleep'—um—'sleep knits up the ravelled sleeve of care.' " "It isn't much," said Burbage, "but we'll let it go tonight. To-morrow I will get a man to fix it who can write!"

Two Graduations

THERE was a pleasant entertainment at the residence of the Hon. Lysander John Appleton, Saturday evening, to which all the neighbors were invited.

Miss Daisey Mayme, dressed in white and pink, was graduated by her mother from the dishwashing department of the kitchen to take charge of the cleaning of the parlor, and Miss Byrdye, who has hitherto prepared vegetables for cooking, was graduated into the Preparatory Cooking Department.

Each read a essay, and each was given a diploma.

If We Could See Ourselves as Others See Us

By WINIFRED BLACK

TMAN and woman sat in front of me at the theatre last night. They came in very late—the woman peacocking down the aisle with a great fron of ruffles and swishing of laces, the man rather apologetic and just a bit embarrassed by the stares the woman's dress, manner and extremely pretty face attracted.

I didn't hear a word of the play after the man and the woman came and sat in front of me. The woman had a bad time with her hat; the pins were too long or too short or something, and she hated the way her hair felt when she took her pins out. She took at least ten minutes to get her hat and her dress arranged to suit her, then she began to complain.

It was hot in the theatre—for her, frightfully hot, so stuffy, dear me—she could scarcely breathe.

How close together the seats were! What a lot of pillaging, grasping creatures the managers were, to be sure, squeezing the seats so close together, just to make an extra dollar or two!

What a lot of ordinary people there were in the house, awfully common. They looked like the men and women you see in the cheap alleys in servants. The leading woman, what a fright she was and who on earth made her clothes? The leading man wasn't so bad, but oh, the girl in the blue dress; her voice was really too distressing, and there was a draught, too, for it was all so stuffy. Where in the world did it come from? The doctors ought to send the manager of that theatre a check every month for some of the lot of patients. Any one who could be roasted and then cooled off in that fearful draught a whole evening and not send for the doctor the next morning must be made of iron.

The man began by being sympathetic, then he became apologetic, then polite, then frigid. At the end of the act he turned to the woman in passe styles just because you object to a simple little thing like this. Well, I won't be governed by your prudish opinions in the matter, so there!"

"If women ain't all alike!" declared Billy, emphatically. "One day they are knocking a thing in a way to make Peary's hunmerin' record look like a piece of limburger, an' the next day they fall for it, harder than a bunch of hoboes for a free lunch. Take the Party, now; that other evenin' while we was swingin' 'round in a free-for-all at the Ginger Snap Social Club, she says to me with the soft pedal on, 'William,' she says, 'do you know what soul mates are?'

The Epicurean Suitor

"'Sure,' says I, 'a pair of shoes.'

"'I'm she goes higher than Orville Wright. 'Nix on the comic stuff,' she says, 'if you ain't willin' to admit that I'm your affinity we better cut out our date with the preacher.'

"'Well, Kiddo, three days afterwards she's that sore on Affinity Earle that you'd think he done her a personal injury.

"'Say, William,' she says, 'ain't this soul mate business the limit? After all, it takes a epicure to really appreciate the everyday viands in the feast of life.'

"'An' what's a epicure?' says I.

"'A fellow which knows his food before he swallows,' says the Party; 'an' it takes a epicure to choose a wife.'

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

BE A SENSIBLE WOMAN

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young woman, married six weeks, very much in love and I love one another very dearly. But what I wish to ask is this: Before my marriage there was something in my past life which would not do to tell, which has all been lived down, and can prove there is nothing wrong in it. We have all before we were married, and his mother knows it and was satisfied he should marry. After we were married he told me he ought to tell me his mother and she resolved me with all motherly affection. But since then he has changed, began to back his things, which was one week later—I had to send to his mother to bring me in her house again, and that I cannot do to-day. Now, and even brought up the past. Now, I am a girl who is very fond of home and with every one, and I do not want my husband to sign away from me in the home my account. But do you think if he would tell me it would be right for people to talk about his going home right away, and never telling me, and that is what is causing the trouble, and would you advise me to go to live with him when he goes home? It is making me feel that he does not care for me. B. F.

MY dear, you must not let it cause trouble between you and your husband. You are a woman about this and be content to wait until things smooth out. The mother is jealous over her son leaving home—but he will, and you make it hard for him, but help him all you can. He could not give up going to see his mother, you know. Tell him to tell her that you are sorry to see her leave, will be glad to go and see her. Don't try to stop his going and don't talk against his mother. You say he is fond of you, loves you; try and be content with that.

SHE NEVER LET GO

IT was a wizened little man who appeared before the judge and charged his wife with cruel and abusive treatment. His better half was a big, square-jawed woman with a determined eye.

"In the first place, where did you meet this woman who, according to your story, has treated you so dreadfully?" asked the judge.

"Well," replied the little man, making a brave attempt to save dehaulk at his wife, "I never did meet her. She just kind of overtook me."

This Day Be Sad

KEEP till to-morrow, keep
Till the joy's away,
The laugh, the jest, but weep
This day!

Joy would seem out of place
Unless as more be gay;
Show me a tearful face
This day.

Aught that thou hast of song,
Sing it not now, I pray;
For thine own words I long
This day.

Aught that thou hast of jest,
Tell it not me, I pray;
Sorrow will suit me best
This day.

Aught that thou hast of grief,
Tell it me now, I pray;
Thine may give mine relief
This day.

All that thou hast of love,
Lavish on me, I pray;
That will my grief remove
This day.

The Tragedy of a Bride.

By ANNIE LAWRIE.

A YOUNG woman killed herself in Pennsylvania the other day. She was a bride, twenty-two years old, very pretty, unusually bright and greatly admired in the little village where she lived.

She and her husband went to a party one night, and there was a strange young woman at the party, not so pretty, not so bright, but more attractive and not so happy as the bride. I'll warrant you. The strange young woman danced with the young husband, and he said to that "Your wife doesn't know me, but I know her." And when the young husband asked the strange woman what she meant she laughed and said: "I've got a package of letters at home that your wife wrote to another man before she married you."

And the next day the young husband went and persuaded the strange young woman to let him see the letters—and then, instead of destroying them without reading a word, as any human being with the heart of a man or the pity of a hyena would have done, he took them home and gave them stood to his little, pretty, helpless, frightened young wife—English, pitiful, little letters that she had written to an old sweetheart.

She cried and begged him not to read them, but he tore them open and read them over and made her listen to every word.

The next day he brought the letters home and that night he brought the other young man with him again and read them aloud to them and sneered at them—and the young little wife went out into the kitchen and drank the Carbolic Acid, and when the mother of the man who had promised to love, honor and protect her as long as they both should live.

And the husband who did this thing—oh, he's alive and well enough.

And the woman who gave him letters and the unspeakable cad to whom the letters were written in return for a first place—oh, very much alive, and rather pleased with themselves I suppose.

More Stews Than There Are Towns in Ireland Come to Friend O'Reilly

Who would have guessed there are so many ways to make an Irish stew? In a safe guess that our Lawrence O'Reilly did not know what he was bargaining for when he offered that $5 prize for the best recipe of this good old dish. And the mail clerks down at the post office are just waiting to catch Mr. O'Reilly some dark night for suggesting this contest.

Oh, you Mr. O'Reilly! You are in for trouble! Such a stew! After all, there is the one big job of picking out the best recipe. Now, we cannot pick one out of the quiet room at Danvers? Anyway, the letters are coming and coming and then coming in some more, and O'Reilly couldn't stew them any more than old King Canute could tell the tide to go back out to sea.

Housewives all over New England are sending their Irish stew recipes for the $5 first prize offered by Mr. O'Reilly and the $5 second prize offered by the AMERICA. Hurry up with your recipes! Here are a few the letter carrier brought to-day:

"WILL CRY FOR MORE."

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

When Lawrence O'Reilly eats this Irish stew he will cry for more. Take 4 pounds of shin meat and bone, cook in 4 quarts of water till tender; then add 1 pint of corn sliced and 3 carrots, 1 small yellow turnip, 5 good-sized potatoes, all cut in small pieces; salt to taste; when vegetables are cut in add one-half cup of rice and one chicken with a little flour and water mixed.

MRS. T. H. ROBBINS.

Rockport.

DONEGAL STEW IN CORK.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

An Irish stew for O'Reilly from Donegal, but made in Cork: Cut in slices of salt pork or bacon fried in an iron kettle; when brown remove pork and add one or two good-sized onions cut fine; fry until nice brown; take your meat; use shank bone of beef, cut in pieces, put into pot; add junks and lay on top of onion; cover the whole with boiling water and cook slowly 2 or 3 hours, covered tightly; one hour before serving add a few slices of yellow turnip; cook until half hour before serving; add your potatoes cut in dice, the desired quantity; season with pepper and salt, and thicken the gravy with a little flour and water just before serving. In this way potatoes are nice and mealy and not soggy as they would be if put on with the meat; half an hour is long enough to cook potatoes in a stew.

214 Webster street, Needham Heights.

MUTTON IN MOTHER'S STEW.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Here's the "old reliable" stew recipe. Two pounds neck of mutton, 3 quarts of water, boil, then simmer slowly; skim off fat and add 6 or 8 large potatoes cut in moderate slices; some of onions, pepper and salt to taste; half an hour before serving have dumpling ready, to make the dumplings take 1 cupful of flour and 1 scant teaspoonful of lard, little salt, 1 pint of flour, mix all stiff with water, round into small balls and drop into boiling stew; toast some thin bread, cut in pointed pieces, arrange around edge of platter on which to serve, after cooking from 2½ to 3 hours.

MRS. C. E. RITCHIE.

195 Grove street, Lynn.

"TIS THE REAL THING.

Editor AMERICAN:

Here is my dear old mother's way of making Irish stew. I know when Mr. O'Reilly tries it he will know he has the real thing at last: Two and one-half pounds of lamb from shoulder, cut in pieces, three good large onions, two carrots, two parsnips, one good sized turnip; cut all up in pieces, empty over all, let them stand an hour and bring to a boil; then put in potatoes, let potatoes boil; add pepper and salt to taste; put potatoes in about fifteen minutes before stew is done; boil slowly; have ready two tablespoons of flour brought well to a smooth paste with water; stir in five minutes before taking off the fire. This gives a nice gravy and fine flavor. Serve with dumplings. For dumplings take heaping cup of flour, two heaping teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoon of butter, pinch of salt; make into thick batter with milk; drop with tablespoon into boiling stew; cook fifteen minutes before taking stew off fire.

MRS. K. FLINT.

No. 42 Myrtle street, Lawrence.

"OLD DONEGAL" RECIPE.

Editor AMERICAN:

Cheer up Lawrence and don't get discouraged over that longing in your stomach for a real Irish stew that you had in Old Donegal. Here is my recipe for it. Six or seven pounds of righteous beef and shank and skin off the fat; when the meat is tender add three onions three carrots, three medium potatoes, three turnips, cut in thin slices; then add a little barley; when the vegetables are nearly done add six or seven potatoes cut in thin slices; season with salt and pepper; add some dumplings. Recipe for dumplings: One quart of flour, one pinch salt, one and one-half teaspoonfuls baking powder, enough flour to make a light sponge; drop in stew in a few minutes before serving.

MRS. MARGARET DOLAN.

No. 68 Concord street, Somerville.

NOTHING LIKE FRYING.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Take a pound and one-half of the bottom of the round, cut into cubes, fry brown in all four parts of lard and add 1 pint of water, 1 large onion, pepper and salt to taste; let it boil for two hours; add to this six sliced potatoes, thicken with flour and water. If dumpling is used omit flour and water. Frying the meat before boiling makes the gravy a rich brown.

MRS. J. M. HOLDEN.

Bird street, Foxboro, P. O. Box 325.

ENOUGH FOR LITTLE O'REILLYS.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Irish Stew. Domegal Mr. O'Reilly: Into an iron kettle put three or four pounds shin of beef, a tablespoon salt, set back on stove, cover with cold water, remove the scum that rises, and add small cup of barley; let boil three hours; boil three dozen potatoes over, then add three parsnips, three carrots, one turnip, one small yellow turnip, all cut in cubes or dice, and boil half an hour longer; then add two hours longer; then give a generous helping to Mr. O'Reilly and there will be enough left for six little O'Reillys and their mother.

FRANCES HARRINGTON.

6 Cameron street, Roxbury.

ONLY TWO MONTHS FROM HOME.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

One pound of stew beef, two onions and four potatoes; put beef and onions in water with the beef and let it stew for one hour; then add the potatoes and let it boil; then slice the potatoes and onions and put on top of the beef and stew for half hour with a little gravy; add a little catsup, a little more catsup, keep the lid on tight while stewing. This is very good if stewed right. I have made it many times and very good. This recipe was given to me by a lady who has been in this country for two months.

MISS NANCY MERCURIO.

96 Summer street, Lynn.

TRY THE OVEN, O'REILLY.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Pull a dish with alternate layers of mutton or beef sliced potatoes and onions, season with pepper and salt; pour in plenty of water for gravy and cover the top closely with potatoes; cook in a moderate oven and let the potatoes on the top crisp before it is served; the onion can be omitted if desired.

MRS. LINA GOYETT.

19 Otsego road, Worcester.

FAREWELL FROM TYRONE.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Here is my recipe for Irish stew as made in Tyrone. Dip three pounds of mutton chops in hot water for two or three minutes and then in cold water; place them on bottom of a clean stew pan, barely cover them with cold water, bring them slowly to a boil; skim what rises to the top; add one pound of salt and one of pepper and one of chopped parsley and one all-spice; add a dozen potatoes and one dozen of small onions, whole, and let them simmer for one hour; then add one dozen potatoes, pared and cut to about the size of the others; twenty minutes before you are to eat add dumplings dropped from the spoon and keep the cover on the stew till the dumplings are done; then add a pint of hot milk and a little butter, and you have an Irish stew fit for O'Reilly to eat. Wishing Mr. O'Reilly a pleasant good-by,

NELLIE COREY.

75 Cottage street, East Boston.

DON'T FORGET THE GARLIC

Editor AMERICAN:

Cook some with plenty of meat on it. Put in stew nug. Stew all night; next chop it up if needed and put it in the pot in the stew mug. Boil with spuds in fresh water; little salt; take them out of the water and mash with butter; put them in the mug with the liquid; boil carrots and turnips separate; put in the mug; walnut, boil them good, strain and put them in the mug with onions; add a little garlic put in mug, water and all, salt and pepper to taste. Stew mug three hours after cooked. Do you know the rest? If you don't get Mrs. O'REILLY.

LITERARY NOTE

Mrs. Lysander John Applesauce doesn't want any credit this week for one line from "Every one thinks," she is fond of saying, "that my husband, Lysander John, is editor of Appleton's Magazine, but he isn't. I write that myself. And from the fact that we are all so literary. Why, do you know, my daughter, Darcey Mayne, has read as many as seven books from the public library in one week? The college professors couldn't read as many as that!"—Atchison Globe.

Now, How Old is Young Johnny Jones? Get Out Your Paper and Pencil

Again—How old is Johnny Jones?

Don't you hear the question everywhere? Poor Auntie Age was a mathematical twist-er, but little Johnny Jones is causing all New England to dig out their arithmetics and algebras in an endeavor to find the answer.

Old and young, fair and light, rich and poor, black and white—they are all competing in the contest, and the older boys and girls of New England are among the most enthusiastic over finding the correct solution to this problem. Here it is:

When teacher asked little Johnny Jones his age, he replied:

"When I was born my sister was one-quarter the age of mother. Sister is now one-third as old as father and I am one-quarter of mother's age. In four years I shall be one-quarter as old as father."

The BOSTON AMERICAN wants you to help it by solving the problem and sending your name and address to Johnny Jones Contest, AMERICAN, Boston, Mass.

Here are some of the answers:

JOHNNY 9-3-5 YEARS.

Editor Johnny Jones Contest:

Little Johnny is 9-3-5 years; sister's, 16 4-5 years; mother's, 28 2-5 years; father's, 50 2-5 years.

Editor Johnny Jones Contest:

Sir—Johnny is nine years, six months, and three days old. Allowing 365 days to the year and twenty-eight days to the month, that is 3,350 days.

Johnny's mother he was born was 2,302 days old, which is one-quarter the age his mother is now, 10,360 days. His sister is now 8,018 days old, one-third is 16,144 days. Four years from now Johnny will be 4,890 days old, and his father will be just four times that, 19,580 days. And at present he is just one-fourth the age his mother is now, 13,824 days. I guess this is about right.

Johnny Jones is nine and three-fifths years old. Johnny's sister is 16 4-5 years; he thirteen and three-fifths years which will be one-fourth of pa's age, which at present is fifty and two-fifths years. In four years pa will be fifty-four and two-fifths years old. Sister is one-third of pa's age, fifty and four-fifths years, or sixteen and four-fifths years old at present. If Johnny was born nine and three-fifths years ago, sister was then seven and one-fifth years, which was one-fourth of mamma's twenty-eight and four-fifths years at Johnny's birth, which being nine and three-fifths years ago, makes mamma now thirty-eight and two-fifths years, or four times as old as her little Johnny, who is exactly only nine and three-fifths years old.

SHOCKING INDICTMENT OF THE WHOLE CITY

The report of Secretary J. Frank Chase read to the directors of the Watch and Ward Society at the Boston City Club on Tuesday is a SHOCKING INDICTMENT of the whole city of Boston.

And by that is meant every man of whatever creed or politics, who has failed to take cognizance of what the Watch and Ward Society declares to be the "prevalence of crime of the most appalling nature flourishing apparently without hindrance or restriction. We believe the annual traffic in human souls in this city amounts to hundreds. . . . There are hundreds of young girls and boys enticed yearly into the habit of using cocaine. . . . A growing evil is the immoral cafe and resort which flourishes under a peculiar police relaxation. . . . At the urgent request of a pastor of a church situated in the danger zone in the South End there was gathered evidence against an immoral house said to have been unmolested for twenty-two years."

The complete report of the Watch and Ward Society is easily within the reach of everybody. Generous extracts from it have been printed in all the newspapers. Naturally AFTER SUCH A STARTLING EXPOSURE CITIZENS WOULD TURN TO THE POLICE OFFICIALS to learn what is to be done to check the monstrous evils complained of.

The esteemed Herald gives the police reply through O'Meara in O'Meara's usual way. Here it is:

"Police Commissioner O'Meara stated that he had not seen the Watch and Ward Society report, and he emphasized the fact that he was not at all interested in the reported 'prevalence of crime flourishing without hindrance or restriction.'"

"I haven't seen the paper," he said, "and have no desire to see it. I do not wish to be drawn into a discussion of it or associated with it in any way."

If the Herald's statement is correct, O'Meara SHOULD BE REMOVED FROM OFFICE FORTHWITH. He furnishes in the above words convincing evidence of his unfitness for the place he occupies.

NO PUBLIC OFFICIAL, whether he be police commissioner or any other commissioner, has the right to ignore in such a supercilious and insulting way a report so specific.

And in no other city in the United States would a police commissioner DARE TO MAKE SUCH A REPLY. It emphasizes the "public be damned" spirit of years ago, and the spirit of Bill Tweed in his question, "What are you going to do about it?"

Clearly there is to be no help from the police department, notwithstanding that the average man on the police force is a competent, honest and well-meaning individual.

WITH PROPER INSTRUCTIONS from the head of the department the awful condition of affairs could be ended in a few hours.

Let it be kept clearly in mind all the time that the "prevalence of crime flourishing without hindrance and restriction" means POLICE PROTECTION.

WHO IS PROTECTING THE CRIMINALS, AND WHY?

Never was there such a SHAMELESS DISREGARD OF DECENCY and propriety in a public official as the Herald shows in the case of O'Meara's insult to the people of Boston, whose servant he is.

Instead of instantly taking steps to SUPPRESS CRIME O'Meara's inactivity MAKES CRIME ALL THE EASIER. In so many words he tells the grafters, crooks and procurers that he will not molest them!

IS THERE NOT ENOUGH PUBLIC SPIRIT AMONG OUR CITIZENS TO AROUSE DISTRICT ATTORNEY HILL TO ACTION?

Either the reports of the Watch and Ward Society are true or they are not true. If they are not true an investigation will make that clear at once.

IF THEY ARE TRUE District Attorney Hill should take the matter forthwith BEFORE THE GRAND JURY and proceed to indict the violators of law.

If Mr. Hill does not act at once, if he does not make a thorough investigation, if he does not either prove or disprove the charges AND BEGIN THE WORK QUICKLY, he should be defeated at the polls. No man can afford to vote for a District Attorney who will sit by supinely while favored criminals are enjoying POLICE PROTECTION.

The public has its remedy in its own hands. O'Meara will do nothing. HILL MUST ACT. If he fails to act he, too, will prove his unfitness for office and should be defeated.

Never was there a greater opportunity for a public official to perform a public service.

IS HILL THE MAN to seize this great opportunity?

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

SUNDAY OPERA CONCERTS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I wonder if Sunday evening concerts will be given at the new Boston Opera House. These concerts on Sunday evenings at the Manhattan and Metropolitan opera houses are a splendid feature of New York life. The entire orchestra of each opera house takes part, a number of the best singers give some of the best songs from the operas and there is always an instrumental soloist of the highest rank. Also in New York on Sunday afternoon and evening the Volpe Symphony Orchestra, and six feet of oblivion when dead.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

That man, Chas. President Emeritus of Harvard, is a sort of 5x6 individual, isn't he? Five feet of erudition while we live, and evening the Volpe Symphony Orchestra, and six feet of oblivion when dead.

THEIR CITY LIFE - - By F. OPPER

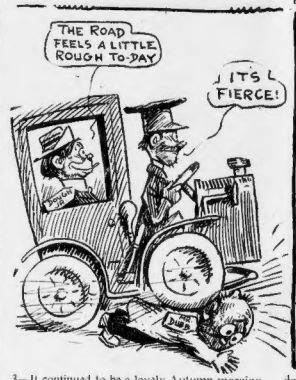
1—It was a lovely Autumn morning. As Mr. Dough whirled along in his automobile he remarked to his chauffeur: "Ah, James, how beautiful is nature!"

2—It was still a lovely Autumn morning when Mr. Dubb arose, after landing on his head, and cussed Mr. Dough from Dan to Beersheba.



3—It continued to be a lovely Autumn morning when another motor vehicle, containing Mr. Dough's son, rolled rapidly over Mr. Dubb.

4—It was a lovely Autumn morning all right. Say, doesn't Dubb have hard luck?

THE FOOD WE EA

Especially Written for the American

By ELBERT HUBBAR

A RECENT bulletin of the Pure Food Commission gives some interesting data about dealers in food supplies.

It seems there are about two hundred and fifty thousand retail groceries in America.

In many of these groceries people sleep at night, or directly adjoining them are living rooms.

Hundreds of these stores are managed by men and women who have no idea of hygiene or sanitation. The idea of not handling food products with unclean hands—or with bare hands at all—has never occurred to them.

The floors of certain groceries inspected by the commission had not been scrubbed in ten years. The counters, scales and shelving had never known hot water.

The quality of the goods sold was a minus quantity to the proprietor. He sold the thing which gave him a profit, or which the people wanted, and beyond this he knew nothing, and cared nothing.

The fact that certain articles used for food absorbed the odors of substances near and the impurities of the place was not known nor appreciated.

Spitting on the floor by clerks and customers was common, and, moreover, invited by precedent and example.

In several instances consumptives were hired as clerks because they would work cheap and were too weak to do out-of-door labor.

In such stores sugar is ballasted by sand; baking powder reinforced by alum; coffee with chicory; molasses with glucose; spices with starch.

Prunes, raisins and other dried fruits were kept in barrels covered merely by a coarse wire mesh on the street, where the air was filled with flying dust and dirt, and rotten refuse near at hand.

It seems unkind to point out the weaknesses and wrongs in a business where so many good men are employed.

Yet the public should be aroused to the danger that lurks in the unsanitary grocery.

We all eat, and the amount of sickness caused by unwholesome foods cannot be calculated.

Very few housewives give as much attention to their food supplies as to dress.
